Hoover Says Inflation Menaces Endowed Colleges

APPEARS AS WITNESS IN COURT CASE

Stanford Trustees Petition For Right to Invest in Common Stocks

SAN JOSE, Cal., Feb. 10.—Former President Hoover today in the San Jose superior court testified under oath he believed possible menace of currency inflation threatened the equity of endowed colleges, such as Stanford university, in their investments in bonds, real estate loans and other similar securities.

Hoover was called as a surprise witness at a hearing before Judge William James of a petition by the trustees of Stanford university for permission to invest part of the university's trust funds in common stocks as a hedge against loss through possible inflation.

"The devaluation of the dollar, the widespread bank credit inflation, and the possible menace of currency inflation are the new factors with which the trustees must deal," he said.

The petition, filed January 22, stated the trustees wish to invest trust funds of the university in stocks of "well-managed corporations" because it is no longer possible to obtain adequate interest from real estate loans or investments in bonds and similar securities.

Hoover caused a sensation as he appeared in the courtroom and was put on the stand by Frank Guerna, attorney representing the trustees.

Hoover Testifies

Judge James agreed to let Hoover testify by reading a prepared statement.

Describing the situation at Stanford university, of which he is a trustee, Hoover said:

"The theory of the devaluation of the dollar is that it will increase prices of commodities, thus causing a rise in the cost of running and necessitating an increase of salaries.

"The theory also implies a transfer of values from the bond holder to the common stock holder.

"The practical effect is simply

DEFENSE FUNDS SET NEW PEACE TIME RECORD

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10.—The house appropriations committee today reported favorably a peace-time record smashing $643,341,000 war department appropriation bill for the 1937 fiscal year.

The bill provides drastic strengthening of air, land and coastal defense forces.

The bill, an increase of $120,444,000 over last year's appropriation, was $29,200,000 less than the budget estimate.

Most of the increase was attributed to an appropriation of $165,359,885 for non-military activities, including $129,000,000 for rivers and harbors projects authorized by congress.

Principal provisions of the bill:

1. An enlisted force of not less than 150,000 men.
2. The procurement of 565 new planes.
3. Expenditure of $8,500,000 for sea coast defense projects.
4. An increase of 5000 officers and men in the national guard to a total of 200,000.

L. A. 'BUM BLOCK' DECLARED LEGAL

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 10.—California's border blockade against vagrants is legal in the opinion of U. S. Attorney Pierson M. Hall who declared today that the campaign enforced by Los Angeles police has precedent in law.

In an informal statement, Hall told John C. Packard, attorney for the American Civil Liberties union that he believed "any state has a right to keep any type of citizens out of its territory."

The federal attorney cited the mass deportation of 196 assorted radicals in 1917 from Bisbee, Ariz., to New Mexico by a semi-vigilante group, declaring the action was upheld in federal courts.

Hall allowed Packard to submit briefs setting forth any legal cause or grievance which might "justify federal intervention."

MRS. LONG TAKES OATH OF OFFICE

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10.—A pretty, dark-haired girl who baked a cake for Huey Pierce Long 26 years ago and later became his wife was sworn today as successor of the slain Kingfish in the United States senate.

Her three children watched from the gallery as she quietly stepped into the place where her colorful, hoarse-voiced husband had once been a dynamic figure.

Many close friends saw the simple ceremony. In the gallery were Gov. James A. Noe, who appointed her, and Seymour Weiss.

The galleries were crowded when Mrs. Long entered, escorted by her senior colleague, Sen. John H. Overton.

Other senators crowded about Mrs. Long, with girlish charm, smiled happily.

TWO ORANGE COUNTY MEN ARE KILLED IN AUTO ACCIDENTS

IOWA FACING SHORTAGE OF FUELS, FOOD

Trains Snowbound on Many Lines in Iowa, Wisconsin and Minnesota

CHICAGO, Feb. 10.—Food and fuel families menaced the blizzard-bound midwest today. A heavy death toll mounted, schools were closed, transportation was paralyzed over vast sections.

Sub-zero temperatures numbed the central states for the 17th of the last 20 days. Almost 250 persons had died from exposure, fires, or in traffic accidents during one of the most prolonged cold waves on record.

Trains were snowbound on nearly all branch railroad lines in Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa, and the Dakotas while main line trains were hours behind schedules.

Trains between Des Moines and Minneapolis were cancelled last night. Winds had piled great drifts across highways and hundreds of miles of roads were impassable.

Iowa, suffering from an acute coal shortage, was menaced by a food shortage. Disruption of train and truck schedules prevented milk deliveries in many towns. Des Moines dealers rationed milk to families with small children.

St. Louis City had enough milk to last through the day but unless highways are opened today, there will be no milk tomorrow. Three trains last night brought St. Louis City its first mail since Friday.

Towns near Arnolds Park, Ia., near the Minnesota border, were cut off from bread supplies by snow drifts. Farm families, isolated by snow, went into reserve food supplies and many may be suffering.

At Eagle Grove, Ia., coal deliveries were limited to a half ton by a proclamation of the mayor.

Temperatures moderated somewhat in Minnesota and the Dakotas Sunday afternoon but dropped below zero again today. It was 22 below at Dickinson, N. D., 20 below at Jamestown and 17 below at Fargo, St. Paul reported 7 below after the mercury had climbed to 3 above Sunday.

With the milk supply from northern Illinois and Wisconsin sharply curtailed, Chicago stores limited sales but all deliveries were made to homes. A shortage will be averted if highways are cleared today and tomorrow.

Schools were closed in most rural districts of the midwest.

After being isolated for 17 hours, nine miners dug through a quarter mile of eight-foot drifts from Rising Sun, Ia., to reach hard packed drifts over which they proceeded to Des Moines.

ARMY TRANSPORT MASTER MISSING

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 10.—The U. S. army transport Republic docked at Fort Mason from Honolulu today with her master, Captain E. S. McLeilan mysteriously missing.

Two hours before the Republic was due, army authorities at San Francisco received a radio message from the ship which read: "Captain McLeilan missing three or four hours. Ship searched but no trace found."

Army authorities were baffled as to what could have happened to the master, who is a civilian. An army boarding party was sent out to investigate as soon as the ship reached quarantine.

Aboard the Republic were the remains of Father Damien, the martyr of Molokai, which are being sent to Belgium, his native land.

PROBE ACTIVITIES OF NAVY LEAGUE

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10.—Munitions investigators pried into navy league activities today in an effort to show that major ship companies sought to use the society to counteract disclosures by the senate ocean mail subsidy inquiry in 1933.

White-haired Nelson Macy, president of the league since July, 1934, testified that contributions had been sought from shipping companies.

But he said he was unfamiliar with correspondence read into the record which showed that ship owners looked upon the ocean mail investigation as "harmful" and "unfair."

Macy and Mrs. Francis C. Hill, assistant secretary, reviewed the league's activities and said its purpose was to support a program to build the navy up to London treaty strength and to stimulate enlargement of the merchant marine.

CCC WORKERS RESCUED FROM CAPE COD ICE

EAST BREWSTER, Mass., Feb. 10.—Seven CCC workers, all alive despite more than 22 hours' exposure to rain, snow and freezing weather, were rescued by coast guards from two ice cakes in Cape Cod bay today.

Completion of the daring rescue was reported in a briefly worded note dropped here by Lieut. P. G. Miller, pilot of a coast guard amphibian, shortly before 11 a. m. The note read: "Seven men accounted for. Being taken to cutter now."

The cutter was the Harriet Lane, which had battled her way for hours through thick ice that coated virtually all of Cape Cod bay.

John Fitzsimmons, 19, of Portsmouth, one of those rescued, was found to be suffering from frozen feet.

The others, all suffering from exposure, were:

Albert Papa, 18, West Warwick. Thomas Malone, 18, Portsmouth. Tony Ray, 19, West Warwick. Norman Beaulieu, 19, Pawtucket. Manuel Bottello, 19, West Warwick. Nicholas Scunzio, 19, Thornton.

The Harriet Lane made the rescue by approaching as closely as possible to the ice cakes on which the seven were marooned, and then by sending a party across several hundred yards of ice with a dory.

Hunger from which the youths had suffered during the first 20 hours of their isolation had been appeased by emergency food supplies dropped by army planes from the Concord, N. H., base of winter air maneuvers.

Although the boys had suffered severely from exposure, they were in far better condition than had been anticipated.

Several youths had to be half-carried to the cutter.

TAXATION OF PAPERS HELD AS ILLEGAL

Huey Long's Gross Receipts Tax Invalidated Today By High Tribunal

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10.—In a sweeping opinion that went to the roots of the American constitutional guarantee of freedom of the press, the supreme court today invalidated the Louisiana state newspaper gross receipts tax.

The court's ruling in the Louisiana case was unanimous.

While submitting its verdict in the newspaper tax law passed at the behest of the late Sen. Huey Long, the court failed once again to render its long-expected decision upon the constitutionality of the Tennessee valley authority.

However, two important rulings upon the validity of sections of the New York state milk control law were presented.

The court's opinion in the Louisiana newspaper case struck hard at any effort of government to shackle the long-guaranteed liberty of the press.

Read by Justice George Sutherland, it traced the history of the guarantee of that freedom, and challenged the Louisiana statute squarely as:

"Not an ordinary form of tax, but one single in kind, with a long history of hostile misuse against the freedom of the press."

The court made clear that it was not intended to except newspapers from any ordinary form of taxation but only to protect their recognized freedom from attacks cloaked in the guise of taxation.

The court concluded:

"The predominate purpose of the grant of immunity here invoked was to preserve an untrammelled press as a vital source of public information. The newspapers, magazines and other journals of the country, it is safe to say, have shed and continue to shed, more light on the public and business affairs of the nation than any other instrumentality of publicity; and since informed public opinion is the most potent of all restraints upon misgovernment, the suppression or abridgment of the publicity afforded by a free press cannot be regarded otherwise and with grave concern."

"The tax here involved is bad not

The bill carried $374,881,000 for military purposes and made available usage of $2,845,592 by re-appropriation. For military purposes alone the new bill exceeds last year's by $23,803,561.

Budget estimates carried provisions for only 147,000 men but the increase was aimed to Garrison completely the Panama and Hawaiian defenses.

The bill provides $45,540,177 for airplane procurement, including $10,669,592 for contract authorization, which will have to be met by later appropriations. The airplane provision was $16,028,655 greater than last year when purchases of 416 planes was authorized for regular army and national guards.

The bill carries $5,500,000 for seacoast defense in Hawaii, Panama and the west coast and an additional $638,125 for the purchase of mobile anti-aircraft guns for Southern California and Panama. The bill added $3,000,000 each for west coast and Hawaii defenses and $725,000 for Panama toward carrying out approved harbor defense projects in those areas costing more than $20,000,000.

The bill carries $24,000,000 for the Panama defenses, $3,141,000 for the west coast and $2,140,000 for Hawaii exclusive of ordnance appropriations.

Other provisions in the bill include the purchase of 2755 horses and 200 mules despite the mechanization program.

HOOVER HEARD AS WITNESS IN COURT HEARING

to increase the cost of operating the institution.

"In such case," Hoover continued, "if our income is to remain fixed, we shall need to employ less faculty or reduce the range of instruction or reduce the number of students."

"The bank credit inflation is a factor independent of devaluation and has already caused a large drop in interest rates."

"Many of our bonds are being called in and equivalent investments can only be secured at lower rates."

"More than two thirds of our investments are subject to call or mature in the next five years, and if these interest rates continue we shall probably lose about one-fourth of our endowment income."

"This would again necessitate reducing the service which our institution gives to youth, even were devaluation not in action."

"The question of currency inflation is one of constant discussion in government and the press, and while not at the moment more than a menace, it is one which cautious trusteeship must be in position to meet."

"The record of similar institutions in Europe under currency inflation is before us, where their endowments are largely wiped out."

Continuing his reading, Hoover said: "Experience in similar occasions shows that common stock and real estate and other equities ultimately rise in value somewhat in proportion to the increase of devaluation or inflation."

"While common stocks, real estate and other equities are subject to risk, yet this may be the lesser risk than bonds and mortgages."

"The gravity of the matter is clear when we remember that Stanford has trained over 15,000 youths, each a part of them without means of their own, and that a community of nearly 10,000 people is largely dependent upon the institution."

"Whatever view we take of the situation, the trustees should have freedom to protect the endowment as best they can."

Starting out his statement, Hoover said:

Grave Problem
"The trustees of Stanford university, in consequence of certain financial policies, are now confronted with a grave problem in the investment of the university endowment."

"That problem is the possible protection of the endowment by investment of these funds in equities such as common stocks and real estate instead of exclusively in bonds and mortgages as hitherto."

"The trustees of sister universities over the country are many of them already taking action to protect their endowment by investments of at least part of their funds into equities."

"The trustees of Stanford are in need of clarification of these powers to make such investments. The problem has only recently arisen. For 50 years much prudence and wisdom have caused the trustees to invest the endowment, now amounting to some $24,000,000, in seasoned bonds and first mortgages."

"Not only has the original endowment been maintained intact, but entirely aside from new gifts, the trustees have by wise investments increased the capital."

"Common stock or real estate or the other equities have not been purchased because of the greater risk involved."

Credit Inflation
At this point Hoover began his discussion of the changed situation brought about by devaluation of the dollar, "the widespread bank credit inflation, and the possible menace of currency inflation."

Almon Roth, business manager of Stanford university, followed Hoover to the stand.

In connection with Hoover's statement that Stanford's income (in 1928) was $24,000,000, Roth testified that the rate of Stanford's return on investments in 1928 was 4.89 per cent.

"In 1935 it was 3.95 per cent," he said.

He added the faculty and other employees took a 10 per cent salary cut several years ago and, despite this, it is now necessary to reduce expenses still further unless enrollment increased or the trustees were granted the right to re-invest funds.

Hoover, looking the picture of health, arrived in the courtroom at 9:50 a. m., accompanied by his adviser, Ben Allen.

Hoover conversed with other trustees and, before he took the stand, pleasantly agreed to pose for cameramen who rushed to the courtroom as soon as the news spread that he was present.

Guernsey, Stanford counsel, addressed the court, saying he wanted to put "a man on the stand who was anxious to present a statement and get away." Hoover is due to leave for Portland shortly to make a Lincoln's birthday address the evening of February 12.

Judge James agreed, and Hoover was sworn in.

Trustee Hoover
The former president was dressed in a dark suit, with his customary stiff white collar. He wore a blue and grey tie, and sat half turned to the judge as he identified himself as "Herbert Hoover, Stanford trustee for 15 years."

ATTORNEY CHARGES CLIENT DYING FOR LACK OF CARE AT ORANGE COUNTY HOSPITAL

Claims that Arthur G. Keene, Olinda cattle and horse ranchman, now held at the county hospital under observation as to his sanity, is being ground between the millstones of a "family row," and "is dying for lack of care" in the hospital, were made before Superior Judge G. K. Seovel, by Attorney Thomas McFadden, of Anaheim, today, as a petition to have Keene declared incompetent was postponed for hearing to February 19.

McFadden and William Waters, Little concern for Keene's welfare in their anxiety to control his property. Mrs. Keene, he said, had placed her husband in a sanitarium for rest and care, but his brother signed an insanity complaint and Keene was removed from the sanitarium in Brea to the county hospital last Thursday.

"He's no more crazy than counsel on either side of this case," declared McFadden.

Keene's son by a former marriage, S. P. Keene, recently was charged with battery by Mrs. Keene's 16-year-old son by a former marriage, after an alleged altercation between the step-brothers.

business concerns to cooperate with the enumerators who call upon them for business census data.

Describing the value of the census, Brand said that from the results, banks and financial agencies are enabled to extend commercial credit more freely because of more accurate knowledge of what constitutes sound operating expenses and stock ratios; newspapers are enabled to establish the consumer market in their circulation fields; wholesalers are able to make a better appraisal of their immediate and potential trade territories and thus avoid unproductive expense; advertising agencies can determine comprehensive and accurate markets for various products; retailers are supplied with needed data on their competitive situation, not only in their particular field but also regarding the extent of other kinds of competitive business.

Real estate values, proper rentals and the basis for percentage leases are frequently determined from business census data, which have great weight because they are strictly factual statements without prejudice, it was stated. As fast as reports are received they are sent to Philadelphia by registered mail, where they are carefully guarded. Five to eight tabulating cards are punched to record the information on each report, and no names or addresses are tabulated on these cards. The cards are punched with other cards to produce the figures which are published and become the recognized basic statistics of business, Brand said.

Additionally, they continued, "administration of such a plan would result in almost complete centralization of political and economic power in the federal government, would create an enormous increase in officialdom, attendance by the usual plagues of graft and corruption," and would "subject the daily life of all citizens to a prying and dictatorial government supervision."

OTHERS HURT IN MISHAPS OVER SUNDAY

of Oroco.

According to Valles, who was driving the automobile in which Oroco was a passenger, the party was returning, early this morning, from a dance in Artesia. He turned the car, suddenly, to avoid a collision with another automobile, and his car turned over. Oroco's body is at Harrell and Brown's funeral home, pending an inquest.

Craig was killed when the automobile he was driving collided with another car, driven by William J. Collier, of Compton. Collier was taken to the Long Beach police station, after the crash, where a police surgeon said that he had been drinking but was not intoxicated. He was not held.

Mr. and Mrs. Bisell and their daughter were injured, last night in a collision in Long Beach. Mrs. Snow was not detained by police. The Bisells were removed to the Community hospital where doctors say that both the man and woman are seriously injured but will recover.

Miss Beatrice Cochran of Los Angeles was painfully injured on Manchester boulevard at Artesia, about a mile north of Buena Park, about 6 p. m. Saturday when cars driven by George R. Alloway, 35, of San Bernardino, and John Munroe Shanklin, 22, of the Price hotel, Garden Grove, collided. Miss Cochran suffered from numerous face cuts and bruises caused by broken car window glass. She was taken to Fullerton General hospital for treatment. Alloway was going northwest on Manchester and Shanklin, in the opposite direction, as Alloway made a left turn onto Artesia, when the accident occurred, highway patrolmen, who investigated reported.

Monroe Donham, 208 West Commonwealth, Fullerton, was injured about 1:30 a. m. Sunday when the car he was driving collided on 101 highway, two blocks north of Los Angeles street, Anaheim, with a car operated by Myron Miller, 17, of 804 East Adele street, Anaheim. Miller reported to state highway patrolmen. Miller said he sought to go around Donham's car when Donham turned left and the cars collided.

Not one accident occurred in the city of Santa Ana over the weekend, in which injuries resulted, according to police records.

Turning the corner of Third and Tenth streets, Eugene Gibson of the Palace hotel, ran his car into the miniature golf course fence at that point, he told city officers. He reported the car he was driving belonged to Paul Winston, 318 West Culver street, Orange. Little damage was done.

Surrounding the casket as it was placed aboard a baggage car for the trip west were floral tributes from the White House and from Curtis' former chief, Herbert Hoover. Numerous congressmen also sent flowers.

The first case was brought by the Borden Farm Products Co., to test a provision of the law providing that dealers who advertise their milk widely must sell it to stores for one cent a quart more than non-advertising dealers. The court by a five to four vote held this provision valid.

The second test came on a suit by Mayflower Farms, Inc., to test a part of the statute which held that firms organized after April 10, 1933, would not sell their milk at the one-cent a quart lower price.

The court by six to three held this provision invalid and sent the case back to the New York courts to determine whether the restriction could be separated from the first provision which was held legal.

CHARGES DISMISSED AS VICTIM RECOVERS

With recovery of Jesus Campos, 38, of 434 Adams street, Delhi, after being seriously wounded in a knife fight on Adams street, January 26, complaints of assault with a deadly weapon, filed against Sacramento Gallagos, 28, and Tony Hernandez, 28, both of Evergreen street, Delhi, were dismissed today by Justice Kenneth Morrison.

Both Gallagos and Campos, are still held however. Gallagos today changing his plea from not guilty to guilty on an assault and battery charge and being ordered to appear tomorrow morning. He served oral notice, asking for probation. Campos will be sentenced this afternoon on a simple assault charge to which he pleaded guilty. Hernandez was released.

DEATH NOTICES

A WORD OF COMFORT
A grudging, calculating spirit precludes progress in life. An element of abandon and of trust in one who works with you is necessary if you are to attain worth while success.

You are bound to blunder and to be unhappy if you attempt to barter with God, to proceed half-heartedly or to mistrust Him. Gather up the shattered fragments of your hope. Put your hand in His and let Him guide you into the way of strength and of peace.

NO CANDIDATE SELECTED BY NEW GOP GROUP

California's Republican Assembly, fearful of making a wrong choice, refused to tie itself to any candidate as the party's presidential nominee at a three-day convention at Santa Barbara which ended last night, according to E. M. Sundquist, who returned from the convention this morning.

Albert Launer of Fullerton and Leslie Kimmell of Laguna Beach, also delegates to the convention, returned today.

A wrong choice, Sundquist declared, "might jeopardize the party's chances at election time."

Definite decision as to whether the California delegates to the national convention would be committed to any candidate was passed to a special committee which will work with Earl Warren of Oakland, state central committee chairman, in choosing a slate for the May 5 presidential primary.

Several factions among the 1000 delegates staged a long battle to throw the assembly's support behind either Gov. Alf Landon, of Kansas, or Gov. Frank Merriam, of California, but without success.

Proposals Killed

The proposals were killed in committee and the delegates voted unanimously that their committee make a decision and present it at a second meeting of the assembly at Visalia, Feb. 29. Delegates from 36 counties and the assembly's directorate will be at the Visalia meeting to hear the report and make a definite decision.

The committee which will cooperate with Warren included Arthur B. Dunne, San Francisco, chairman; Sherill Halbert, Porterville; Franklin S. Donnell, Los Angeles; Sylvia Kempton, San Francisco; Leslie A. Cleary, Modesto; Charles Davies, San Diego; Harold C. Holmes, Jr., Oakland; Wendell T. Robie, Auburn; and John F. S. D'Aule, Los Angeles.

The committee also will work on the party's platform and plans to enlist "the youth of California" in the Republican ranks. The assembly decided that "youth must be considered and given a place in the party's councils if the Republicans are to stage a strong presidential campaign."

Officers Elected

Newly elected officers are: President, Edward S. Shattuck, Los Angeles; vice presidents, Harold C. Holmes, Jr., Oakland, Paul Mason, Sacramento, Sylvia Kempton, San Francisco and George Robert F. Craig, Los Angeles; treasurer, Edward G. Barcome, Los Angeles; assistant treasurer, Herbert Matheson, Alameda.

Regional directors elected: Albert Beecher, Clear Lake; Paul Claiborne, Auburn; Ernest Cerneau, Stockton; Arthur B. Dunne, San Francisco; Richard Style, Alameda; Harrison Call, South San Francisco; Leslie A. Cleary, Modesto; Meredith Polley, Santa Barbara; McIntyre Perles, South Pasadena; E. O. Blackman, Los Angeles; Dr. Walter Boyd, Long Beach; John F. S. D'Aule, Los Angeles; Earl Truscott, San Bernardino, and Charles Davies, San Diego.

HEARING DATE SET

Accident Victim Transferred From Beach Hospital

Moved yesterday from Community hospital, Long Beach, where she was taken immediately after a serious automobile crash occurring Thursday evening near Seal Beach, Miss Louise Montgomery, daughter of Mrs. Victor Montgomery, 1418 North Main street, is resting comfortably today at St. Joseph hospital.

Her sister-in-law, Mrs. Tarver Montgomery, 1104 North Main street, injured just as seriously in the accident, was unable to be moved, although it is the plan of physicians in charge, Dr. J. M. Burlew of this city and Dr. Roy Maranda of Long Beach, to bring her today or tomorrow, to her home, where they think her recovery will be swifter than at a hospital.

Miss Gertrude Montgomery, also in the car when it was struck by Costa Mesa, incurred countless bruises, cuts and a sprained ankle, but was able to be brought directly to her home, where she has been under care of a trained nurse until today.

Defendant Held On Delinquency Count

Charged with contributing to delinquency of a minor girl by assiduously keeping her out too late at night, John Barker, 24, alias John Barton, of 128 1-2 South Madrona avenue, Brea, waived preliminary hearing before Justice Kenneth Morrison today and was bound over to superior court which will act as a juvenile court in prosecuting the case.

Barker today declared he wished to plead guilty to the charge. He was arrested on a warrant signed by Judge H. G. Ames, after Preston Turner, deputy district attorney, signed a complaint against him. The alleged offense was committed on January 9, 1936, according to the complaint.

Local Briefs

Temperatures Saturday ranged between 39 at 6 a. m. and 67 at 2 p. m., according to records of the meteorological station at Santa Junior college. Relative humidity was 67 per cent at 4:30 p. m. and the average wind velocity was 3.1 m. p. h.

Members of the Rotary club will meet at the Ebell clubhouse tomorrow for the regular session owing to alterations taking place at their usual meeting place, according to Ralph Smedley, secretary. A Lincoln program will be presented, with Guy J. Gilbert in charge.

Harry MacKaben, Costa Mesa rancher, who was stabbed in the chest by a prong of a harrow he was operating, was given first aid treatment yesterday at Santa Ana Valley hospital. The harrow turned over, MacKaben, who was able to return to his home after treatment, declared.

A Westminster child, Refugio Cruz, who was bitten by a neighborhood dog yesterday morning, was given first aid treatment at Orange County hospital and sent home.

Nineteen-year-old Robert Pico of Los Angeles, who said he argued with another motorist over details of an automobile accident, which occurred yesterday afternoon, was treated at Orange County hospital for head lacerations suffered when the arguing opponent struck him over the head with a hammer. He was able to proceed to his home after the hospital treatment.

The alleged offenses were committed at the business office of the engineer, who lives at 435 Medrona avenue, Brea, about three and a half months ago, according to sheriff's and district attorney's office records. Lemmon is free on $3000 bond.

HOILES URGES CHANGE MADE IN TEXTBOOKS

Charging that certain textbooks used in local schools set forth the principles of Karl Marx, R. C. Hoiles, publisher of The Register, told directors of the Santa Ana Chamber of Commerce this morning that they could perform a great service by aiding in the elimination of these undesirable textbooks and by promoting the use of books which give the real meaning of liberty.

Hoiles and Supervisor W. C. Jerome attended the chamber directors' meeting to report on the governor's tax conference recently held in Sacramento.

The book "An Introduction to Problems of American Culture," used in the ninth grades in local schools, written by Harold Rugg, is one of the objectionable textbooks, it was indicated by Hoiles, who had a copy of the book with him at the meeting.

Commends Henderson

Hoiles said Superintendent Henderson has done well in attempting to get the undesirable books out of the schools, but that the school official "has a tough job." Many teachers, hired under the previous regime, now have established tenure and still go on teaching false doctrines to children, it was stated.

Education, Hoiles said, is the most important thing in the nation, and the things taught to children should be carefully chosen.

He added that the least that could be done would be to use textbooks in the schools which would teach children the real meaning of liberty, which he defined as meaning the right of every worker to use his energy and his talents to produce what he thinks society most needs, and to strain others from learning or producing or the right of the individual to personally consume large amounts of wealth without due regard for the needs of others.

Jerome made a detailed report on the tax conference, most of which has been published before. He called attention again to the danger of California becoming an asylum for indigents and misfits should the present 15-year period set by the state before people can establish residence for old age pensions, be changed to the five years as set forth in the national plan.

Question Expenditures

The wisdom of government expenditures in the Works Progress administration program was questioned at the meeting after Farm Adviser Harold Wahlberg had presented a proposal to construct an agricultural educational building in Jack Fisher park, Santa Ana.

The farm adviser said the cost to the city would be around $2000, the cost to the county about the same amount, and the balance of the estimated cost of around $15,000 would be met by the government should the project be approved. Wahlberg said he had discussed the matter with the city council and WPA officials. The proposed auditorium would be used as a place to hold agricultural institutes. He asked the chamber of commerce to name a committee of business people on the project.

The directors voted to change the name.

Director Herbert Miller expressed the opinion that it costs more to carry out a WPA project, considering cost of supervision and administration, than if the project were given out a private contract in the first place.

The directors voted to change the name.

Landon Club Offices Are Opened Here

In the interest of electing Alf M. Landon to the presidency of the United States, offices of the "Landon for President club" were opened today at 408 Moore building, with Maxwell Wright of 2112 North Flower street, Santa Ana, in charge.

The appointment of Wright was made by Ross Marshall, head of the club group for Southern California and Kathleen Michael, chairman of the Women's division for Southern California, both of Los Angeles.

Wright received the appointment in the Nineteenth Congressional district which includes Orange, Riverside and San Bernardino counties. Mrs. John Pearson, named as head of the women's division for the three counties, will be business secretary at the local office.

"For the next few weeks, an active organization will be perfected and large quarters on a ground floor of some downtown building will be established," Wright said. "An invitation is extended and a hearty welcome will be given to friends and supporters of Gov. Alf M. Landon who wish to visit the club's new headquarters."

Wright, who said Marshall was the organizer in connection with Landon for President club activities in Southern California, declared the clubs are being organized throughout the country.

Writing Classes In Two Sections

The writers' organization, formed at the Ethel K. Lockwood studio, last Thursday evening, will be divided into two groups; one to meet each Thursday evening at 7:30 o'clock, the other to meet each Thursday morning at 9:30 o'clock, at the studio, 1911 North Main street. Both classes are still open to new members.

The first meeting of the new groups will be held Thursday morning, February 13.

The by-laws so that after this year elections will be held the second Tuesday in January rather than in March. Another change provided that the directors meet every second Monday rather than every second Wednesday.

Mayor Fred C. Rowland invited the directors to inspect the Santiago creek flood control and parkway project. The directors accepted and a date will be set for the visit.

COMMUNISTS DRAW FIRE OF MRS. ASHCRAFT

Declaring that Harold Rugg, author of several textbooks used in the Santa Ana schools "is a communist" and "is attempting to make communists of school students through his textbooks," Mrs. Mina B. Ashcraft, lecturer and author, of Rochester, Minn., today announced the opening of a series of lectures in this city.

Mrs. Ashcraft will speak at 7:30 o'clock tonight in the Christian and Missionary Alliance church on East Bishop street. Her topic will be "The Red Program, How it Works Through the Church."

Tomorrow night Mrs. Ashcraft will talk to adults only on the topic, "How Communism Treats Women." Wednesday night she will speak in Glendale, returning here Thursday night to lecture on "International Bankers and America's Gold," the lecture in which she will tell how communism is financed.

Her concluding lecture, on Friday night, will be on the subject "Red Teachings in the Schools, or the Plot Against Young America."

Mrs. Ashcraft accompanies her lectures with stereopticon slides showing conditions in Russia and leaders in the Communist movement in the United States and Russia. Mrs. Ashcraft said today that she takes full responsibility for every statement she makes.

Referring to the recent talk here by Lewis Browne, Mrs. Ashcraft said that "it is high treason to laud Russia."

Mrs. Ashcraft, who has written several books on phases of Communism said today that "Pacifism, Modernism and Internationalism are a part of the Communist program of working through the churches to disarm America."

She said that "it is time the parents of school children know the truth about Rugg" and that she intends to ask them to sign petitions to the State School Board demanding removal of his textbooks from the schools.

Speaking last summer in Santa Cruz, Mrs. Ashcraft attacked Kirby Page, who was a speaker at the annual conference of Christian Churches of Northern California, as a "wolf in sheep's clothing." She declared that, as editor of "The World Tomorrow," a Socialist publication, Page had openly espoused the theories of Norman Thomas and thereby placed himself on record as opposed to the religion of Christianity.

BIGGEST YEAR OF EXCHANGE REPORTED

ANAHEIM, Feb. 10. — The Central Orange County Citrus Exchange handled the largest shipment of oranges this year than at any time in the history of the organization, according to a report submitted late today at the annual meeting of members of the Exchange. The report was made by A. H. Kirchmann, manager of the Exchange.

Kirchmann said that during the Exchange's fiscal year a total of 1,120,944 boxes of fruit representing 2426 carloads of fruit shipped during the association's fiscal year. Shipments for the crop year, which extends beyond the fiscal year, totaled 2658 carloads of fruit. Last year the Exchange shipped out 1939 carloads of fruit.

In the early eighteenth century in England, diners in some eating places used dogs in place of napkins. Diners wiped their hands on long-haired dogs, which were sent among the tables.

JURY SELECTED FOR TRIAL OF BURGLARY CASE

Two young Mexican women, Mina Marron and Carmen Hernandez, went on trial before a jury today in Superior Judge James L. Allen, charged with four counts of burglary, in connection with depredations of an alleged gang of shoplifters in four Santa Ana stores January 15.

Their two assorted companions, Concha Tielra and Frank Parades, originally pleaded not guilty but changed their plea to guilty to two of the counts last Friday, and asked for probation. The other two counts were dismissed in their case. The four counts were based on alleged theft of goods at the Famous Department store, Montgomery Ward, Sears Roebuck and Hush J. Lowe stores.

Today's defendants stuck by their denials of guilt, and a jury of six women and six men was empaneled today to hear the case, being presented through Deputy District Attorneys Harold McCabe and Clarence Sprague.

Members of the jury are: Mrs. Inez Lehman, Fullerton; Mrs. Olive Ford, Garden Grove; J. D. McMahon, Anaheim; Claude A. Bailey, Sunset beach; C. P. Laxton, Santa Ana; G. A. Starr, Anaheim; Charles Chamsler, Brea; Mrs. Maud Hendrie, Santa Ana; Marie Braybrooks, Midway City; Conrad Trecker, Anaheim; Mrs. Minnie Collins, Santa Ana; Helen C. Hudson, Huntington Beach.

CUT THROAT CORDIALITY

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10. — The nations of the world may be publishing their own version of the story of the conference, but they are going about it privately in a very pleasant way. Our delegates to the London naval conference had a chance to get an insight into world relationships close-up, in a single room. These observations will never be stated officially, but they should be. They include some wondrous sights. The cordiality of the British and Italian delegates, for instance, was amazing.

PALS
The American delegation, before leaving in England, agreed that the first word heard at the conference would be Gibraltar. The British would use it insistently. The Italians would use it insistently. The observations will never be stated officially, but they should be. They include some wondrous sights. The cordiality of the British and Italian delegates, for instance, was amazing.

At that very time, also, the Italian press was telling its public what a bad lot the British are. Mussolini was bristling with daily threats from Rome.

You could have floored the delegates with a blue print battleship when British and Italian delegates moved arm in arm to avoid conflict about Gibraltar and, in fact, about everything.

UNDERSTANDING

No one even got excited when the Japanese withdrew. Everyone seemed to realize that the Japanese government was acting for domestic political effect at home. It was trying to impress its people with the idea that it is making a big nation out of Japan on paper.

That also seemed to explain Italian press attacks, and Mussolini's bristling.

The recognition of these domestic political situations created a sort of mutual understanding among the delegates. No one previously thought that Japan would or could try to build up to U. S. equality, and there was less war talk in London than in Washington.

WARNING

Do not, however, make too much out of this. There are reasons for believing that Europe has gone back to the old diplomatic method of secret treaties. This treaty is not mentioned at international conferences. Such gatherings these days amount to little more than international cocktail parties. The dirty work is done elsewhere.

PACIFICATION

Since the story got out about President Roosevelt ignoring his congressional leaders, several of them have been invited in the side door of the White House for lunch. These visits have not been publicized, recorded, in fact rather extensive secrecy precautions were taken.

Nevertheless, the inside doorman at the east entrance noticed Speaker Burns tip-toeing in a few days ago, and others came individually at another time.

The purpose seems to be to quiet congressional resentment. Also to effectuate a common understanding about what will be done before anything is attempted publicly.

Note—Presidential advisers would not be at all surprised if Mr. Roosevelt neglected to send a tax message to congress, and permitted the recommendation to come from Messrs. Wallace and Davis. It is not considered necessary to stress such a distasteful subject as taxes. A you may have heard, this is a campaign year.

PANTOMIME

The new dealers trudged out of that spending-curtailed conference at the White House, their faces registering deep chagrin, but without any sound effects whatsoever.

Youth-Saver Aubrey Williams told inquirers he did not know how much he could say. Someone asked him whether he meant "say" or "save." He responded both, and ran for the door.

Resettler Tugwell said the saving was all up to "the chief." Someone asked him whether he and his cohorts were mice or men. He answered: "Mice, by golly, and escaped through the same hole."

Other conferees held that matters were still in the "conversational stage," but they would offer no conversation.

Not only from this incident but from others, it is evident that the eminent new deal trapeze artists have been advised what to do with their traps. For the time being, at least, the new deal is being acted out in pantomime. This is a radical departure.

CRANKS

Now it can be told that the federal government did not permit J. P. Morgan and his associates to be lonesome during their vacation on the senate inquisitorial rack. Whenever they went, while they were under senate subpoenas, they were accompanied by U. S. secret service men. Two were ace bodyguards who formerly protected the president.

This was not only irregular but technically illegal. The U. S. S. S. is empowered only to guard the president and his family. Never before were they assigned to guard a private citizen.

The S. S. will probably deny it, but the explanation is that the government had reason to believe a physical attack might be made on Morgan and his associates. Certain overwrought people are supposed to have written crank letters. The government could not afford to let anything happen to Morgan while he was in its custody.

An increase in crank mail has been noted lately by several officials, probably as a result of expanding political tension.

GOLD

Treasury topnotchers back away from the subject gingerly but insiders see more than coincidence in the sudden flow of gold to Europe and the outburst of inflation talk on Capitol Hill.

The presence of $10,000,000,000 worth of the yellow metal in Uncle Sam's vaults has acted as a constant temptation to the inflationists. Their palms itch to make it the basis for bright, fresh currency to pay off the soldiers and finance farm mortgages. But if Secretary Morgenthau licenses the export of an appreciable amount, as he seems to be doing, he may rob the Thomas-Patman-Lemke crowd of their shiny playthings.

It won't be necessary for Europe to call back the three billion which flowed Americanward in the last few years. Only a slight outward movement may produce enough change in psychology to stave off tinkering with the currency.

Treasury experts insist the gold is moving solely because the dollar abroad has reached a point where there is a profit in the transfer. But in the past Mr. Morgenthau has rushed to peg it with his vast stabilization fund.

GOAT

Secretary Swanson's press conferences usually resemble a dress rehearsal of the fleet on the eve of action. He and Assistant Secretary Roosevelt stand boldly in the center while gold-branders flank them.

But Mr. Roosevelt was missing from the front row when the navy met the reporters after the marine band had walked out of the Women's Patriotic Conference. Mr. Swanson explained grimly that he didn't know the reason for his aide's absence. With a wry expression the Secretary declined to be dragged into a discussion of the recall of the musicians. He did not know who issued the order and he wouldn't talk about it if he did.

Privately the diplomatic navy chief is hopping mad over the affair. Se are most of his officers, who believe it places the old salts in a ludicrous, landlubber light. But they can't discipline a cousin of the President, especially as Mr. Roosevelt immediately marched forward to assume all responsibility.

FLIGHT

Under cover of investigating airplane accidents a Senate subcommittee starts today (Monday, February 16) a three-star inquiry into the whole field of aviation. As witnesses it has summoned every worthwhile ace of the industry.

In confidential reports aviation manufacturers warn that they can't afford to experiment with new and safer designs because of prevailing uncertainty over government policies. They are now regulated by three bodies—Commerce, Post Office and Interstate Commerce Commission. Sometimes their orders conflict or are changed overnight. Moving figures in the inquiry and industry fear centralizing control in the I. C. C. and hope to obtain President Roosevelt's backing. Originally he advocated placing it in a new agency supervising all transportation lines.

The investigation has a politically dramatic background. It was inspired by Hiram Johnson's resolution demanding all the facts about the airplane wreck in which the late Senator Bronson Cutting was killed. The subcommittee is headed by Senator Copeland, who has been at odds with the administration—especially Postmaster General Farley—on many occasions.

CLEANER

Although President Roosevelt has ordered his aides to minimize the importance of the move, the check-up of potential expenditure is much more than a routine book-keeping rite. It's a serious attempt to put the federal house in order and alleviate concern over future outlays.

It is expected in inner circles that it will also show the depression to be receding on several fronts. HOLC has closed books on emergency mortgages without approaching the maximum of funds it could use. Banks, railroads and industrial concerns are repaying the RFC $50,000,000 more a month than they are borrowing. Demands on the Farm Credit Administration have steadily fallen off. Communities and corporations negotiating with other agencies for loans are finding that they can obtain them from private interests.

It is true that cancellation of authorizations does not save money. But if they had not been cancelled, these authorizations would have grown into appropriations, adding to the public debt. Secretary Morgenthau, who has to find the money for Uncle Sam, is the man who inspired the house-cleaning.

MILKING

Treasury watchdogs on Capitol Hill are anxiously awaiting President Roosevelt's action on numerous omnibus claim bills heading in his direction. They will accept a veto as a signal to smash the free-for-all method of handling this kind of legislation.

Ordinarily a private claim appears as a single measure and two objections in the House kill it. But early this season the House adopted a system under which numerous claims can be tied into one piece of legislation. The strategy consists of including so many claims that no member would have the hardihood to oppose the bill for fear he might be trapped on when his turn came. It is also supposed to make it more difficult for a president to exercise his veto.

Under this tit-for-tat method of legislating the claims are rarely considered on their merits. Adverse reports by the Controller General and departmental heads are disregarded in a spirit of good-fellowship. In one instance it was discovered that the bill had been paid long ago, while a pending measure calls for payment to a church for damages suffered during the Civil war. FDR has indicated his distaste for a system that will cost the treasury many millions if it becomes a permanent fixture.

SAVED

Felix Frankfurter has waged a quiet fight to preserve the system which has filled New Deal ranks with brain trusters.

The principal training school for "liberals" inside and outside government service has been the offices of Justice Brandeis and the late Justice Holmes. For years they selected as their secretaries a graduate of Harvard Law School and Prof. Frankfurter's classes. Among the law clerks who graduated for these posts are Thomas G. Corcoran and SEC Chairman James Landis, who wrote the holding company and securities and exchange legislation.

When Justice Stone went on the bench he chose a secretary from Columbia Law School, where he used to be dean. Justice Cardozo also intended to honor Columbia, leaving Justice Brandeis as Harvard's only footer. But Mr. Frankfurter persuaded Mr. Cardozo to rotate his choices among Columbia, Harvard and Yale. The mentor of so many New Dealers saved Harvard from being thrown for a complete loss.

NOTES

Treasury and post office bills carry bigger allowances this year—partly natural growth and partly fancy trimmings like airplanes for Coast Guard.

Cramping further loans by RFC doesn't look so good for hard-pressed railroads trying to raise tax-money. Investors do not take up government insured home mortgages as fast as expected.

Landon is confronted with a puzzle by Borah's decision to go after Ohio delegates—some of Landon's friends insist that he shall run under wraps a while longer for the sake of glamor.

Christian Science

"Spirit" was the subject of the lesson-sermon yesterday at the Santa Ana First Church of Christ, Scientist. The Golden Text was from Paul's first epistle to the Corinthians, "The Spirit searcheth all things, yea, the deep things of God."

A Bible selection in the lesson-sermon contained these passages from the Book of Isaiah: "For thus saith the high and lofty One that inhabiteth eternity, whose name is Holy; I dwell in the high and holy place, with him also that is of a contrite and humble spirit, to revive the spirit of the humble, and to revive the heart of the contrite ones." It cited also the words of Jesus, from the Gospel of John, "It is the spirit that quickeneth; the flesh profiteth nothing; the words that I speak unto you, they are spirit, and they are life."

One of the correlative passages from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy included the statements: "The Bible teaches transformation of the body by the renewal of spirit. Denial of the humbleness of matter is a great step towards the joy of spirit, towards human freedom and the final triumph over the body."

TOWNSEND HALL JAMMED FOR BIG MASS MEETING; FOUNDER CLASSED WITH IMMORTALS

By WALTER R. ROBB

Seven hundred Townsends and others greeted Colonel Ralph D. Horton of Los Angeles and State Area Manager Ted E. Felt Saturday night in Townsend hall, 509 West Fourth street. This marked the beginning of a series of mass meetings which will be held in the newly opened Orange County Townsend Headquarters building. The place of meeting was filled to its seating capacity and many were turned away because not even standing room was obtainable. Townsends came from all parts of the county to hear the eloquent and forceful speakers on the program.

The meeting was called to order by C. W. Riddle, president of Club No. 3 in Santa Ana who then presented Harry D. Riley of Anaheim as the evening's presiding chairman.

T. Dunstan Collins of Santa Ana was introduced to the audience as the director of the orchestra present. Collins stated that the orchestra was composed of some of the younger members of the Townsend band and that the concert to be given would serve as a sample of what the Townsend band would later contribute to the movement. Under his direction a 30 minute concert followed which greatly pleased the audience.

The chairman then introduced State Area Manager Ted E. Felt who appeared on the program as the first speaker but he confined his remarks largely to announcements of other intended meetings and a brief resume of the rapidly continuing progress of the Townsend movement.

Horton Speaks
Colonel Ralph D. Horton, the principal speaker who was presented by Chairman Riley, for a full hour held the assembled crowd spellbound with his oratory. With keen analysis he outlined the nation's problems and showed what an effective medium the Townsend plan would be in solving them.

He began by addressing Townsends as being patriotic citizens banded together to preserve the nation from threatened chaos and disaster. He said the hope that goodness and love might prevail among men characterized the very spirit of the Townsend movement.

He called attention to the humbleness of the leader of the movement and said that Dr. Townsend was laboring in the movement without thought of self aggrandizement because of his love for the people and also suggested that all true Townsends were likewise motivated. Pointing to three pictures of Washington, Lincoln and Townsend which hung high on the wall back of the speaker's stand he said, "It is not always necessary to die to become immortal." Briefly he outlined that Washington wrote his name among the nations and the world's immortals because he fought for the release of his people from the tyranny of an unjust taxation. That Abraham Lincoln likewise wrote his name among such heroes because he freed a people dark in color from a physical slavery. Speaking then of Dr. Townsend he said, "Likewise this man has subscribed himself to the task of averting another threatened national chaos by bringing a new freedom to a people enslaved by a system of unadjusted economics." Rising to eloquent heights

He concluded with the statement that "it is within our power to help in the coming political campaign any party who will guarantee to help us enact our plan into law." But he further stated that it will prove to be political suicide for those who seek to defy the mandate of the people of this movement. At the close of his address and many times during its progress he was given great and prolonged applause.

EVANGELIST IS VISITOR AT SUNDAY SCHOOL

Evangelist Sylvester Sanford visited the Sunday school classes Sunday morning at the United Brethren church and announced Sunday school night observance in the revival services tonight. When special recognition will be given to classes having 100 per cent attendance. He also entertained the school with accordion selections.

In the morning sermon he chose as his text, John 11:28—"The Master is come and calleth for thee." He made it clear how the Saviour of men is calling to every person to renounce sin and live for God. During the service Mrs. Bertha Roman and Charlotte Colby sang "Come Unto Me."

In the afternoon the Junior Christian Endeavor society won the silver cup award for the largest attendance at the Orange County Christian Endeavor rally held in the Presbyterian church at Orange.

All four Christian Endeavor societies were well attended at the 6 o'clock hour. Evangelist Sanford opened the evening service with piano march selections. In the service he also played the accordion and the musical saw. The choir sang, "It Pays to Serve Jesus." The evangelist spoke upon the topic, "The Finest of the Wheat." He showed clearly how God is constantly offering us the finest and best for our lives.

Each service was well attended. Children's meetings are being held on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday afternoons this week at 3:30 o'clock. Wednesday night the children will give a demonstration of what they have learned in these meetings, and Thursday afternoon will have a party.

Smoking Camels Found to Ease the Strain and Promote Well-Being

Life gets more complex. The pace grows faster. People live harder. Where do we see the effects? Frequently on digestion, so often overtaxed by the busy whirl! Smoking Camels is or definite aid in promoting good digestion. Turn to Camels yourself. They have a mildness and delicacy that never grow flat or tiresome. Make the pleasant experience of smoking Camels part of your daily life, and see how much more zest you have for smoking and how your digestion is measurably improved. Camels set you right!

And now we come to one of modern life's most gracious privileges—dining at Keen's English Chop House in New York, as shown at the right. Like the Mermaid Tavern of Shakespeare's day, Keen's is famous as a gathering place of congenial spirits.

"We've noticed that patrons who appreciate fine foods also appreciate fine tobaccos," says William (above), of Keen's. "Camels are a favorite at Keen's English Chop House. We've noticed that our guests who smoke Camels during and after meals seem to find more pleasure in dining."

OPTIMISM REIGNS AS OLYMPIC FUND DRIVE BEGINS

CHICAGO, Feb. 10.—If there is the slightest concern about raising the $250,000 necessary to defray the expenses of the Olympic team this summer, you'd never suspect it in chatting with Avery Brundage, the Solid Man of American amateur athletics.

"We really have only to raise $170,000," asserts Brundage, on the eve of his departure for the Winter Games at Garmisch-Partenkirchen. "This amount will be far over-subscribed." You'd think he was talking about $10.

Brundage has been there before. Regardless of how you feel about America taking part in the Berlin frolics, Aug. 1-15, you must admit Brundage is a star all-around athlete for 20 years, after breaking in in the Orange and Blue of the University of Illinois. Quickly growing into a tremendous figure in the construction field, Brundage never lost interest in the scanty clads.

It was quite natural for an executive of his ability and love for sports to become president of the Amateur Athletic Union and to again take command when agitation against this country sending a team abroad threatened to wreck the parent body he had fought so long to make secure.

PENCIL AND PAPER

Brundage says that the Olympic fund will be raised something like this:

Subscription	$170,000
Colleges	50,000
Basketball	50,000
Track trials	40,000
Boxing	20,000
Swimming	10,000

Total $350,000

"You would be amazed to know how the real backers of the Games have rallied to the cause since the split in New York," explains Brundage. "We didn't need so much in 1932, when the Games were held in Los Angeles, but more than $200,000 was contributed toward the Amsterdam production. I expect that figure to be exceeded this trip. Chicago alone gave $47,000 in 1928, when I saw more than $30,000 pledged around one luncheon table.

"You can't beat the spirit of amateur athletics, particularly when it is applied to the Olympic Games. We have 500 committees working throughout the land. It follows that our hastily formed organization is clumsy and unworkable, but we rather prefer it that way. We always have prevailed. We much prefer to have 1000 persons contribute $1 each than to have one person contribute $1000."

SCHOOLS LEND HAND

Harvard, Notre Dame, and numerous other institutions contribute $1000 to Olympic funds. There are to be student body tag days at scores of schools. All National Collegiate A. A. and Western Conference track and field proceeds go to the fund.

Basketball, newest of Olympic sports, will lend a tremendous hand with eight teams participating in a three-day final tournament at Madison Square Garden, April 2, 4, 5 or 6. From these clubs will be selected the 14-man Olympic team.

The final track and field trials, set for the new stadium on Randall Island, New York, July 10-11, normally are good for $30,000, while the semi-finals—east, midwest, and Pacific coast—netting an additional $10,000.

"The cost of conducting this campaign is negligible," explains Brundage. "The only outlay is for clerical work. The campaigners are volunteers."

"What those opposing American participation forget is that members of the German Olympic team, like all other competitors, are to be guests of the International Olympic Committee."

Avery Brundage and the American Olympic Committee is one reason why the show always goes on.

Climbing Dons Trim San Bernardino, 28-22

EASTERN JAYSEE CONFERENCE
	W. L. Pct.
Riverside	3 0 100%
Fullerton	3 0 100%
Santa Ana	3 1 75%
San Bernardino	3 2 60%
Pomona	3 3 50%
Chaffey	3 4 43%
Citrus	3 4 43%

Santa Ana junior college's hard-to-beat Dons today clung tenaciously to third place in the Eastern conference basketball scramble and breathed easier because they were successful in getting over the "hump" at San Bernardino Saturday night when they scalped the Braves 28-22.

It was not without a terrific struggle that the Santa Anas were able to subdue the team that Coach Al Reboin calls "the most underdog team in the league." Mentored by one of the conference's few leaders not trained in Southern California schools, the Indians looked every bit as powerful to Reboin as the potent Riverside Bengals who now share the top of the heap with Fullerton. Doug Smythe, a product of Texas Tech, has introduced new maneuvers on the court as baffling as the tricky formations his grid squad used last fall.

The contest started the tightest defensive battle in which Reboin's hustling hoopers have engaged this term. Nearly five minutes elapsed before either team could successfully penetrate the other's air-tight guarding. Then Tom Lacy swished in a shot from the side and immediately afterwards Ken Nissley was fouled. As the gift throw was missed, Fred Erdhaus leaped up and tipped in the ball from under the basket.

John Henry sank a long one from mid-court and with the Dons leading 6-0 Coach Smythe removed his "shock troops" for his first stringers. Two successive baskets and a free throw whittled the Santa Ana margin down to one point but two baskets by Erdhaus and a couple of foul shots by Nissley widened the breach to 11-5.

However, the Braves refused to be impressed and rolled in a procession of buckets to give them the lead 12-11 at halftime.

At the start of the second stanza things began to look dark for the Dons as San Bernardino slowly drew away until it held an 18-14 lead—an extremely large one in that close battle. Lacy and Nissley each contributed baskets to tie it up and Len Lockhart counted his one successful shot of the game to put Reboin's gang ahead, 20-18. Erdhaus pumped in one from the side and the Dons slowly enlarged their lead until the final gun.

Two 'Cripples' Star
Everyone of the seven men Reboin employed performed capably. Erdhaus and Nissley, the two "cripples" appeared none the worse off because of their ailments and even led the scoring. The smooth center totaled 11 digits while the petite forward rolled in eight. Lacy played a finished floor game and counted for five points. Henry's and Lockhart's guarding was steady while Tay Riggs and Bob Browning worked in well as reserves.

Although they have a bye in conference games this week end, there will be no rest for the Dons. Reboin takes his men to Compton to play a return match with Coach Gordon Clark's Tartars whom Santa Ana beat 31-26 early in the winter. Reboin also is dickering with Loyola college authorities for a practice game here Wednesday night.

NEW YORK, Feb. 6.—The major league training season opened officially today when the first contingent of the Cincinnati Reds sailed for its training camp at San Juan, Porto Rico.

DAVISCOURT, STEINBORN CLASH Phoenix In Prep League?

ARIZ. SCHOOL APPEALS FOR SPOT IN C. I. F.

The Register learned from a reliable source today that Phoenix high school probably will become a full-time member of the Coast Preparatory league next year.

Arizona officials have asked formal permission to join the C. I. F. for athletic purposes and the C. I. F. meeting in Los Angeles Saturday, indicated it would have no objection to admitting Phoenix to the Coast league which for the past year has limped along with only four schools—Santa Ana, Long Beach, San Diego and Alhambra.

Whether the Coast league will accept Phoenix is not known, but many believe such a set-up would be satisfactory since it would enable each Coast league school to make an out-of-state trip every other year—a prize they have been seeking eagerly for several years.

Subrosa reports were to the effect that the Coast league also might get Herbert Hoover school of San Diego as well as Phoenix, and that Woodrow Wilson of Long Beach might come into the fold if a purely local political situation could be ironed out.

The E. adopted its new constitution Saturday but reduced considerably the power that was to have been concentrated in the so-called executive committee. This committee virtually will be an advisory board but its actions will be subject to review. The first intention was to give the board complete control of prep athletics, and abolish such inter-league events as the Coast league's football carnival last fall.

Virginia's women golfers also were winners, 4-1.

ARCADIA, Feb. 10.—Mrs. F. A. Carraud's Time Supply, winner of last Saturday's $7,500 Antonio Handicap in a field that included the great Discovery, today was one of the favorites for the $100,000 Santa Ana Handicap to be run Feb. 22.

Although Time Supply had a 22-pound drop in weights over Discovery, his victory was so convincing that handicappers immediately rated him one of the big four for the rich race—Discovery, Top Row, Azucar and Time Supply.

The five-year-old son of Time Maker and Surplice finished five lengths ahead of the field and on or eight lengths if the race had been over a mile-and-a-quarter, the Santa Ana Handicap distance, rather than a mile and a furlong.

Pompey's Pillar was a surprise second and Ariel Cross finished third. Rosemont was fourth, Discovery fifth.

St. Louis Cards Sign 'Babe' Gordon Of S. A.

Tabbed as the best looking prospect out of 255 in their training camp at Fresno, Glenn ("Babe") Gordon, young Santa Ana outfielder, was signed today by the St. Louis Cardinals.

Gordon is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Gordon of 320 Cypress avenue. A former Santa Ana high school all-around athlete, he has been employed at the Mendocino State hospital at Talmadge.

"Babe" fawn here from Fresno last night and is under instructions to report tomorrow at Riverside where the Santa Ana youth and described him "as the cream of the crop of 255 ambitious rookies."

Santa Ana Mormons Win, Play L. A. Next

Three formidable basketball teams, representing stakes in Los Angeles, San Bernardino and Hollywood, still stood today between Santa Ana's Latter Day Saints and their second successive trip to Salt Lake City for the National Mormon tournament.

The Santa Ana quintet hurdled its first round obstacle, San Diego, in the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium here Saturday night.

Closer than the 41-26 score indicated, the struggle was settled in the fourth period after San Diego had crept up to 26-24 at the end of the third quarter. "Buck" White, a new man in the Santa Ana lineup, tanked two field goals and started a rally that left the San Diegoans groping behind.

The lineup:
Santa Ana (41) (26) San Diego
Acker (10) Hansen
Padias (5) (8) Ferguson
Denio (8) (6) Patterson
Sears (7) G Fitch
Teter (3) G (4) Connel

S. A. MAY NOT GET RELAYS UNTIL 1937

Coach Bill Cook today expressed doubt whether he would be able to promote his proposed Santa Ana invitational junior college relay meet this year.

Originally proposed for sometime this month or early in March, Cook is now contacting jaysee coaches to ascertain their opinions on the issue. However, it is proven to be too late to put the meet across this year, Cook says he will immediately start making arrangements for next spring.

Because of the Don - Pasadena rugby game scheduled for Thursday afternoon, the first day of the junior college inter-class meet has been moved up to Wednesday afternoon.

WILSON HERE TOMORROW FOR SAINT OPENER

Coach Clyde Cook today picked his lineup for the game at Poly field which tomorrow inaugurates one of the most comprehensive baseball schedules in Santa Ana high school's history.

The Bruins of Woodrow Wilson high school, Long Beach, come here for the opener, which begins at 3:15.

His entire scheme of things shattered by the eleventh hour injury of Bob Wilde, veteran shortstop and key man of the infield, Coach Cook named a starting nine that he forecast would be changed many times during the three-months campaign.

Wild went out for the season last Friday when he aggravated an old knee dislocation.

"There are four or five boys scrapping for Wilde's position," Cook said. "The job is wide open."

The Saint mentor indicated, however, that against Wilson he would start Ray O'Campo, small but fleet substitute from last year's strong club.

Cook's disposition was not improved by the illness of Jim Wilkins, Santa Ana's first string gunner, who was out of school last week with bronchitis. Wilkins returned to classes today and was tentatively selected to work about two innings in tomorrow's conflict. Lewis Olivais will be on the ridge at the outset, however. Joe Ortega and Norman Wyckoff also will see action on the hillcock.

Duane Teel was picked to do the catching, with Erwin Youel at first base, Harvey Hemphill at second and Harold Jesse at third. Art Nielsen, Joe Kadowaki and Minoru Nitta open in the outfield, Cook said.

The Saint baseball schedule, slightly revised, follows:

Feb. 11—Woodrow Wilson at Santa Ana.

Feb. 18—Santa Ana at Woodrow Wilson.

Feb. 25—Santa Ana at Whittier.

Mar. 2—Fullerton at Santa Ana.

Mar. 6—Santa Ana at Riverside.

Mar. 10—Santa Ana at Fullerton.

Mar. 11—Santa Ana at Glendale.

Mar. 12—Whittier at Santa Ana.

Mar. 13—Riverside at Santa Ana.

Mar. 17—Brea at Santa Ana.

Mar. 18—Glendale at Santa Ana.

Mar. 20—Santa Ana vs. Long Beach at Alhambra (League).

Mar. 25—Santa Ana at Brea.

Apr. 2—Santa Ana vs. Alhambra at Alhambra (League).

Apr. 17—Santa Ana vs. Long Beach at Long Beach (League).

Apr. 18—Santa Ana vs. Valencia.

Apr. 24—Santa Ana vs. Alhambra at Santa Ana (League).

May 1—Santa Ana vs. San Diego at Santa Ana (League).

Two home runs by Outfielder Gray were just enough to give the St. Louis Blues, fast colored team, a 6-3 decision over Brea's baseball team at Brea Sunday. One of Gray's robust smacks came with a runner aboard.

All of Brea's runs came in the ninth when, with the bases loaded, Joe DiHarcie tripled. The box score:

NEW CHAPEL OF TUSTIN CHURCH IS DEDICATED

TUSTIN, Feb. 10.—Filled to capacity by interested friends, both local and from throughout Southern California, the Snow Memorial chapel of the First Advent Christian church of Tustin was dedicated at impressive services at 2:30 o'clock Sunday afternoon.

Dr. E. F. Barnes of Boston, Mass., president of the Advent Christian General Conference of America, preached the dedicatory sermon. The church history, written by Mrs. Sarah M. G. Brown, was read by the pastor, the Rev. Howard F. Nason. The church was organized in 1880 at a meeting held at the home of Mrs. Carolyn Downs on Main street. Mrs. Downs' daughter, Mrs. Cynthia Snow, contacted mercantile wholesale dealers in San Francisco, who financed the building of the chapel in 1881.

The invocation and Lord's prayer were given by the Rev. Calvin A. Duncan, pastor of the First Presbyterian church of Tustin. The responsive Scripture reading was led by the Rev. C. F. Martin of Santa Ana, and prayer was offered by the Rev. E. B. Arnold of Pasadena.

Ernest Criml of Pasadena, architect in charge of the church rebuilding, gave a short talk. Hubert Howell, chairman of the building committee, presented the church keys to L. H. Harper, president of the board of trustees. Harry Hanson, treasurer of the financial committee, made a brief report, stating that the building program cost over $3300 and that many persons had donated their time and services to the rebuilding of the chapel.

Musical selections on the program included a vocal solo, "Open the Gates of the Temple," by Ernest Criml; two selections, "Holy, Holy, Holy" and "O, Magnify the Lord" by the choir and congregational singing of "We're Marching Onward to Zion" and "Majestic Sweetness," under the direction of Carl Fromhold of Los Angeles.

The Strange Case of Julia Craig

by Nerd Jones
Copyright NEA 1936

BEGIN HERE TODAY
JULIA CRAIG, secretary to GEORGE WOODFORD, lawyer, is ambitious to become a night club singer. Because of this, she quarrels with PETER KEMP, young lawyer who is in love with her. Julia shares an apartment with AMY SANDERS. Woodford gives a yacht party and asks Julia to come as a singer. Others in the party include CINTRIA LEE, dancer; Mrs. JOSEPH, widow; HUGO VASARI, and ROYAL NESBITT. They go to Evergreen Island where Woodford has a lodge. There Julia meets TOM PAYSON, camping near the shore. She is attracted to him and hunting and Nesbitt is injured. The party leaves immediately to get him to a doctor. Julia gets a job singing on TONY LATTI's gambling ship. She sees Payson frequently in Woodford's phone booth and warns her to say nothing of what happened on the yacht. SMITH GARLAND opens a new night club and Julia is asked to sing. Julia learns Payson is backing the club. Nesbitt's dead body is discovered. Peter questions Julia and she is held as a material witness. Next morning Payson secures her release on bond. Peter Kemp offers to defend her. NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XXIII
By morning Julia's head had cleared and she faced the world with more courage than she had been able to summon before. Buchen's barrage of questions. She saw now that they had depended much on a surprise attack, hoping to uncover something. They had taken her after a hard evening at the White Club, when she was too tired to stand, much less answer questions. In the light of morning she was able to tell herself that nothing could really happen to her. She knew nothing of the intrigue aboard the Wood Nymph. It had been something which she had sensed rather than witnessed—and there was the added fact that she had accompanied Woodford and his party to Evergreen Island much against her will. But what had Buchen meant by saying that Woodford had suggested the prosecuting attorney question her? Had Woodford simply given Buchen the names of his guests, or had he somehow suggested that Julia Craig was the most likely suspect? The thought chilled Julia, made her more than ever afraid—for, obviously, Woodford had all along been trying to shield either himself or someone else.

Nevertheless, armored by the knowledge of her innocence, she faced the new day with much more calm than Amy could muster. Wearing into a stupor, Julia had been able to sleep—but poor Amy appeared at the breakfast table pale and heavy-lidded. The shock of Nesbitt's death had been difficult enough, but now with Julia dragged into the mess, Amy was almost ready for doctors and nurses. "I'm scared, Julia. The morning paper tells of your being questioned, and that the police say they are putting—wait, I'll read it." She picked up the paper and read, "Police told reporters they were putting considerable hope in the testimony of Julia Craig, better known as Nadine White, night club singer, who was aboard Woodford's yacht."

"That doesn't mean anything, Amy. And there's something I want you to do for me."

"What's that?"

"Don't mention that you know Nesbitt. I told them that I'd known Nesbitt for some time before the yacht trip."

"But, Julia! That makes it just that much worse for you."

Julia shook her head. "It won't. And there's no need of your being mixed up in this. Remember—you've got to stick to what I told them now!"

Amy's reply was prevented by a staccato knock which startled them both. Nervously Julia went to the door and opened it. The early-morning visitor was Smith Garland.

"Sorry about the hour, Julia. Hello, Miss Sanders. He strode into the room in his dynamic manner, turned suddenly to Julia again. "Is there anything I can do?"

"That's nice of you, Smith. But everything is right now."

Garland looked relieved. "You'll be able to go on tonight at the club?"

"Of course. I don't think they'll call me again. And Peter Kemp is going to watch out for me."

"Kemp?"

"He's a young attorney I know."

Garland's forehead deepened its lines. "If I were you I'd get someone like G. Williams Miller. He handles Payson's affairs. I'll speak to Tom about it, if you like. You never know what might turn up, and it pays to have good counsel, Julia."

Julia shook her head. "I've already told Peter I wanted him—if I need a lawyer at all."

The night club operator seemed still dubious. "All right, Julia. But I know one thing. This young Buchen is out for blood."

He'll hang this thing on somebody or know the reason why. If you're easiest. . . . His voice trailed into a meaningful silence. Amy got up from the table, her breakfast untouched. "Julia, do you think you really ought to sing tonight?"

"She doesn't have to unless she feels perfectly all right," Garland said.

"I am perfectly all right," Julia assured them. "I'm not going to let them stop me now!"

Garland smiled. "Good girl!"

Payson called to take Julia to the White Club that night.

"Feeling all right after your ordeal?" he wanted to know when they had settled themselves into his roomier and started through the thickening night traffic.

She nodded. "At any rate, I'm feeling much better than when you found me last night. Tom, they could have hanged me, and I don't think I'd have had the strength to object."

"I know. . . . His lips closed in a thin line. Then: "I'm going to remember this Buchen. Payson turned to study Julia's soiree profile. "You're a brick to stand up under all this. The fact is, I should be down there myself. I was on Evergreen Island."

"Oh, you mustn't tell them that!"

"Why not?"

"Woodford told them that someone tried to get into the radio room. Buchen asked me if anything else happened on the island, and I had to tell him about your attempting to use the radio phone. But I said I didn't know who you were."

"I'm afraid that's bad, Julia. You see, I told Woodford that night my name was Payson."

Julia's hand flew to her throat. "I—I'd forgotten that. Do you suppose Woodford remembered?"

Tom laughed easily. "After all, Julia, I haven't been exactly a recluse in this town. And that night when I stood before Woodford I had a sneaking suspicion he recognized the then."

"Oh, Tom. . . . I wish I hadn't told them about it."

"You had to. Buchen knew it from Woodford and he was laying for you."

"But it looks bad, that I pretended not to know who it was."

Payson was silent a moment. "We'll have to wait and see, Julia, and I don't think we'll have to wait long. With Buchen at the helm, things will be cracking fast on the Nesbitt case."

"Let's not talk about it any more, Tom."

"That's a good idea." He smiled down at her. "Let's talk about us, shall we? I haven't had a chance to tell you how sorry I am about what happened at the club the other night. You mustn't mind"

Theresa Davis. She has a vicious tongue.

"It wasn't Theresa Davis I minded," Julia said quietly. "But she was speaking for your whole crowd, Tom. I could tell that."

He released one hand from the wheel, seeking her hand. "She wasn't speaking for me, Julia. That's what I want you to be sure about."

"I know. You've been grand, Tom. And I—I appreciate it." She laughed ruefully. "It seems as if you're always getting me out of trouble, since the first day we met."

He was silent a moment, threading the car carefully into a faster traffic lane. "I think I got it, Julia," he said at last. "You appreciate it. . . . but that's as far as it goes."

"What do you mean, Tom?"

"I mean I'm in love with you," he said quietly, not turning his head. "You haven't an answer for that, have you?"

"Not now, Tom."

He nodded. Then, suddenly, in a wholly different tone, he said, "Here we are, Julia."

Julia stared through the windshield. The doors of the White Club were scarcely visible, so great was the mob outside! They pushed into the entrance-way, overflowed from the sidewalk and into the street.

"Looks as if this is going to be bigger than the opening night," said Payson in an odd voice.

"I know. . . . why," Julia answered. "It's because of the publicity about—Royal Nesbitt."

She turned to Payson quickly. "Turn the car around, Tom. I'm not going in there!"

He looked at her in astonishment. "Why, Julia?"

"I won't be stared at as a sensational curiosity! Most of them out there haven't come to hear me sing. They've come to see the murder of Royal Nesbitt." She was sobbing now. "I won't be that kind of a success. I won't, Tom! I'll come back to the White Club when they've forgotten all this."

Payson sped the car past the milling mob, turned at the next corner.

"I don't blame you," he said. (To Be Continued)

HOLDS MY FALSE TEETH
TIGHTER AND LONGER
I've tried several kinds of powders to hold my false teeth. When I tried FASTEETH I found the one powder that does not thin out or wash away, but "stays put" all day. It gives a most pleasant feeling, a real sense of security and holds and holds! Breath is always pleasant. If anyone with loose-fitting false teeth wants all-day comfort and a real stay there fit, insist on FASTEETH at any good drug store.—Adv.

Start Construction Work On South Main Extension

WORK GIVEN TO 306 MEN: WPA FUND IS USED

Road construction work on the first section of the South Main street extension, beginning at the state highway in Corona Del Mar and moving toward Martin's airport and Santa Ana, was under full headway today with 306 WPA workmen on the job.

The first section of the road construction will establish a brand new thoroughfare from Corona Del Mar to the Palisades road, near Costa Mesa, a distance of 4.02 miles. The right-of-way for the thoroughfare, granted by James Irvine across whose large acreage of grazing and farm land it extends, will be 80 feet wide and the roadway, itself, 50 feet wide. Set up under a Works Progress Administration program which would require 200 men 12 months to complete, the job probably will be completed sooner inasmuch as many more than 200 men are working.

Government Gives Grant

The Federal government, in co-operation with Orange county, has allowed $144,853 for employment of men and the county, $36,796, for a total cost of $181,649. Of the county's share, the state of California, which will take over the thoroughfare as a secondary state highway after its completion, according to the plan, furnished $12,600 for construction of culverts.

Under direction of County Engineer Nat Neff, the roadway location was surveyed and the road itself was designed. Lee Nelson, assistant to Neff, is resident engineer for the project, while Carl Lindeman is resident engineer for the WPA in charge of the men and actual work.

According to Engineer Neff, 140,000 cubic yards of dirt must be moved in the 4.02 miles of road construction now under way. Dump wagons, operated in trains and pulled by the county's three new diesel tractors, are being used in moving the dirt, while the workmen are doing the actual grading by hand.

The present work under way includes clearing the right-of-way, construction of numerous culverts, necessary because of the gullied area through which the road passes, and construction of cattle passes under the gully fills, to permit range cattle on the Irvine property to walk beneath the roadway from one pasture area to another.

The present project provides only for completion as a graded roadway. It will be up to the state of California to determine what paving shall be completed later when the road is taken over by the state road department as a state highway. The 306 men—and it is expected 400 may be on the job daily before the work is completed—are working on five-hour schedules of six days per week in two shifts daily. Of the 306 men, approximately 250 are common laborers and the remainder skilled workers such as operators of tractors, mechanics, foremen, timekeepers, etc.

Right-of-Way Grant

It is understood that Irvine, who granted the right-of-way over his property gratis, will make the right-of-way grant permanent if the thoroughfare is completed through as a state highway within five years.

While it is not proposed at present to extend the road from Palisades road through to Martin's airport, it is generally agreed that such additional construction will eventually be completed, possibly also as a WPA project, thus providing an almost "bee-line" route from Corona Del Mar to Martin's airport at the end of South Main street. The highway link from Palisades road to Martin's airport would be 2.3 miles long. The total distance from Corona Del Mar to Martin's airport thus would be 4.02 miles plus 2.3 miles, or 6.41 miles.

— Political Rumblings —

By PAUL VISSMAN

Another abortive attempt at recall blew up with a large bang Friday in Anaheim when voters of that township expressed their confidence in Justice of the Peace Charles Kuchel by casting 2719 votes against recalling him as compared to the 624 votes cast favoring the recall.

It is significant that he was retained in office by a larger majority than was accorded him at the last general election when he was reelected to the office he has held for the past 11 years.

The recall election was forced by A. E. Hargrove, Anaheim insurance man who charged Kuchel with inefficiency. Hargrove was defeated for the office in the last election. He was the only candidate opposing Kuchel in the recall and received 529 of the votes favoring a change in the office.

Political observers in Anaheim say that the outcome of the recall was never in doubt. The voters there, they say, have expressed their confidence in Judge Kuchel by re-electing him to the office twice and nothing in the past year has occurred to make them believe that he has lost his efficiency.

There will be more darned fun at the supervisors' meeting Tuesday!

On that day the board is scheduled to appoint J. Fred Sidebottom to the office of county recorder, succeeding Miss Justine Whitney, resigned. On the same day a strong delegation from the Farm Bureau is scheduled to appear before the board with a demand that no appointment be made and the office consolidated with some other branch of the county government.

The Farm Bureau suggestion will be given the same consideration as would be accorded a tallow pup running through — Oh—shall we say Death Valley?

The Epic wing of the Democratic party has announced, through Al Sessions, chairman of the political policy and procedure committee, its intention of placing the name of Upton Sinclair before the Democratic nominating convention as candidate for president.

It seems that the Epics are mad at President Roosevelt because he has not acceded to their demand to name a working majority on the California list of delegates to the convention. At a recent convention of the End Poverty League they issued an edict to the president declaring that unless he did give them a working majority the Epic support would be given some other candidate.

The only thing the Epics overlook is that the entire nation will be voting for president. Upton Sinclair may be material for governor in California but to the rest of the world he is just another actor.

The Epics backing Sinclair and the Republicans divided over Hoover and Gov. Frank Merriam as "favorite son" choices of the G. O. P. It looks like California is due for a big political year.

P.-T.A. GROUP COMMENTS ON NEW PICTURES

Two pictures mentioned in this week's review of motion pictures by the California Congress of Parents and Teachers are scheduled to show in Santa Ana this week. The two pictures booked for early showing here are "The Lady Consents" and "Petrified Forest."

Verdict on the two pictures booked for next week and six others scheduled for early showing here are released by Mrs. M. W. Hollingsworth, chairman of the motion picture committee of the Santa Ana Council of the P.-T.A.

"The Lady Consents"

"The Lady Consents"—RKO directed by Stephen Roberts. Cast: Ann Harding, Herbert Marshall, Margaret Lindsay. "A vividly dramatic presentation of the modern triangle problem. Anne Talbot, her husband Michael, with his father, Jim, form a singularly happy group, with amazing capacity for love, work and play. The other woman in the guise of an attractive young tennis champion from Kansas, forces Anne to divorce her husband. This she does, contrary to Jim's advice, with good grace and mistaken ideas of sportsmanship. Intelligent action, pointed dialogue and amusing repartee, with considerable casual drinking and tricky manipulation of situations which brings about the inevitable happy ending. Mature."

"Petrified Forest"

"Petrified Forest"—Warner Bros. directed by Archie L. Mayo. Cast: Leslie Howard, Bette Davis, Genevieve Tobin, Dick Foran, Humphrey Bogart. "In sharp contrast to a crazy world in which mortals live and loved and battle, lies the Petrified Forest of Arizona, imperturbable monument to the ages. To a girl in a remote desert gas station comes Romance in the shape of a wayfarer, a writer chap whose interest is caught by the maiden who reads Francois Villon as she doles out hamburgers. A few tense drama-laden hours spell all of life to this strange pair. A gallant gesture remains for the man, who finds rest at last in the Petrified Forest, the burial place of a world of out-moded ideas. An engrossing picture with excellent action on the part of the principals, and an unforgettable characterization of the outlaw, Mantee, by Humphrey Bogart. Mature."

"Anything Goes"

"Anything Goes"—Paramount, directed by Lewis Milestone. Cast: Bing Crosby, Charles Ruggles, Arthur Treacher, Ida Lupino. "A motley crew—a gangster masquerading in clerical cloth, a night club queen and her bevy of American Beauties, a love-lorn youth traveling on the passport of Public Enemy No. 1—a journey from New York to Southampton. A farcical plot, with lagging tempo and elaborately staged musical numbers. Family."

"Brides Are Like That"

"Brides Are Like That"—First National, directed by William McCann. Cast: Ross Alexander, Anita Louise, Joseph Cawthorne, Kathleen Lockhart. "Hazel Robinson flaunts her parental advice when she marries the ambitious boy with the winning personality."

ORANGE COUNTY FRUIT AND NUT SURVEY STARTS

Under the direction of the agricultural commissioner, a survey of fruit and nut acreage has been started in Orange county.

The survey is a part of a statewide program sponsored by the state department of agriculture and financed by means of the federal Works Progress Administration. The county direction of the project is entirely in the hands of the county agricultural commissioner, statewide administration being provided by the department of agriculture, through the federal-state crop reporting service, and the state office of the WPA in San Francisco.

Forms Set Up

Forms have been set up so that the information to be gathered will not duplicate that previously obtained in the federal agricultural census, but will augment it with valuable information not obtained heretofore, the announcement stated.

"The information to be collected will be valuable to agriculture, in that it will reveal the relationships of various crops, the predominance of certain varieties and provide general information for the benefit of those producing fruit and nut crops throughout the state," the announcement said.

Ask Aid of Growers

In requesting the cooperation of growers with the enumerators it was emphasized that use of the information for tax assessment purposes is not permitted and that there is nothing to be gained through failure to cooperate. Speed in completing the survey

PROFESSIONAL PLAYS

It is almost impossible for the beginning writer to write an acceptable professional stage play without the coaching of someone who has actually had a play produced by professionals. A play, it has been said, is not written, but built. This is true. If you cannot see your play as a group of characters pitted against one another; if you cannot see them doing things rather than saying them, you are not yet ready to tackle a professional play.

Here's a point that holds good in the amateur field as well as the professional field:

Keep Action on Stage

Don't let your characters come in and tell about important things that happened off the stage. If your action is such that it cannot be brought onto the stage, it is probably not the right kind of action for a play. Nothing irks the knowing play-goer so much as to have a character come in and tell of some dramatic bit of action that happened out of his sight. If two characters are going to have a fight, the audience wants to see them fight, not hear someone tell how "Walter lapped Samuel!"

Select Right Plot

Selecting a plot that has to be desired so that it may be finished before the harvest season arrives when those on the relief rolls may seek regular employment on farms.

In announcing the survey it also was pointed out that the completed information will be valuable "to transportation, marketing and various public and private financial agencies."

ADULT GROUP TO INTERPRET CURRENT NEWS

A "reasonable interpretation of current news events" will be attempted by the adult education class in world geography meeting Tuesday evening in Room 210, Willard Junior High school, it was announced today.

The historical and geographical backgrounds of world events will be studied, with emphasis upon their significance in determining present activities.

Study Countries

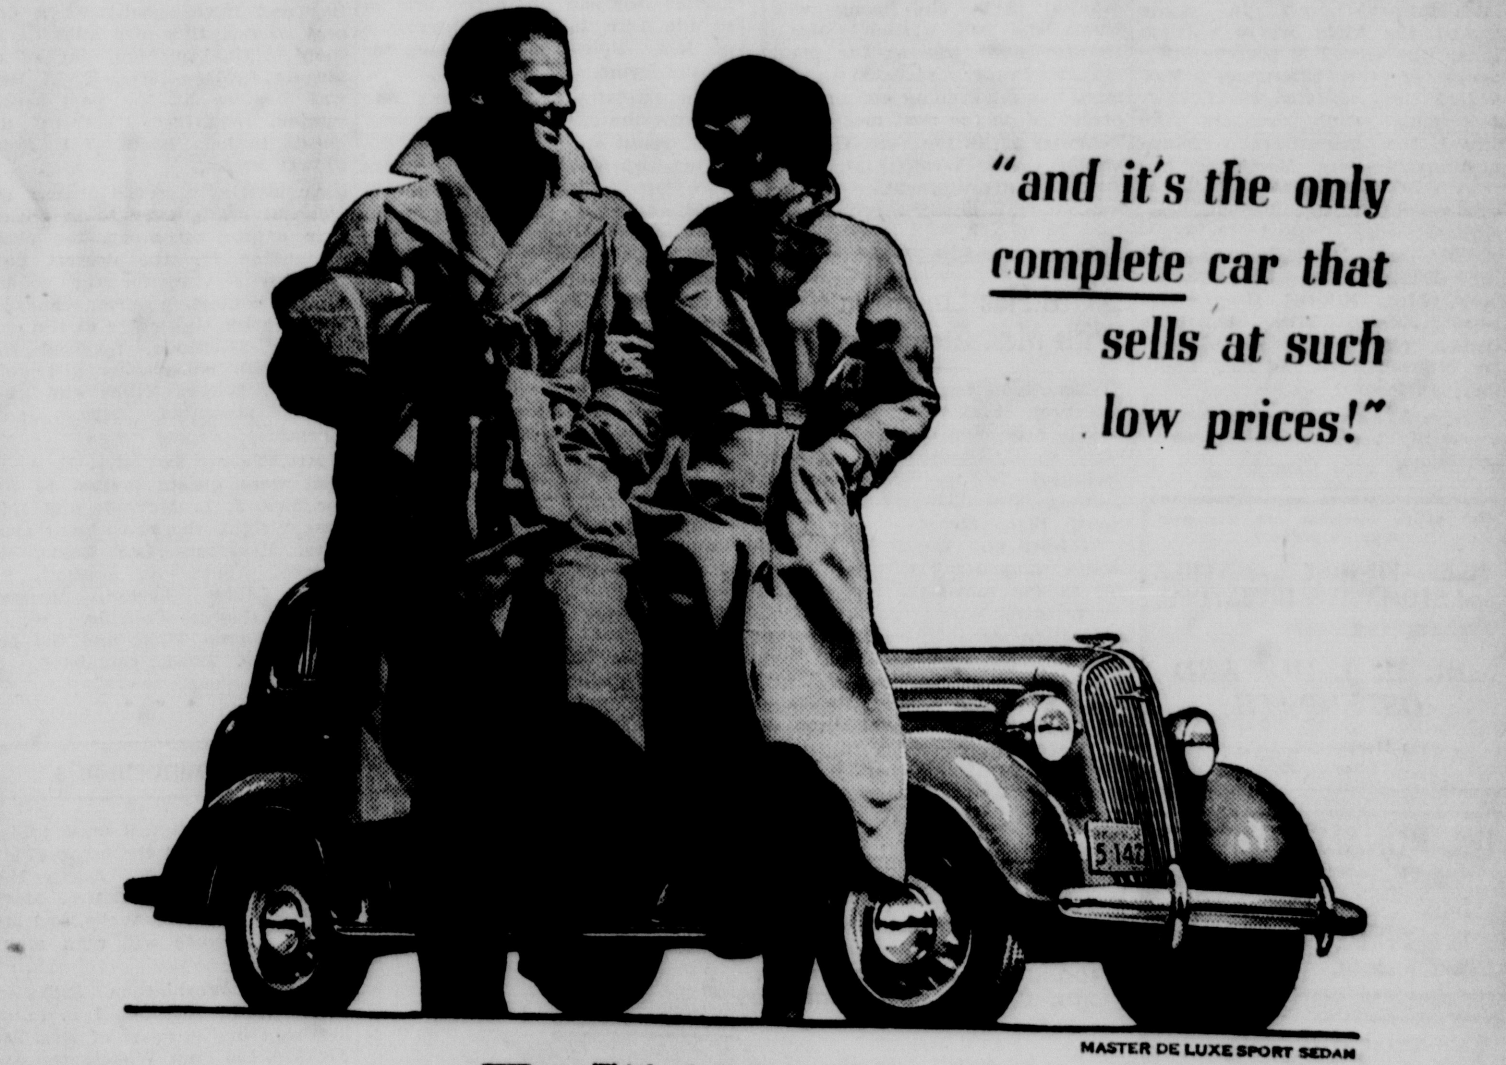

The class will also study the geography, history and culture of particular countries, even though they are not in the news spotlight. It is planned to discuss the countries of South America, and any others in which the class shows interest.

An opportunity for discussion will be offered during every class session, so that the members of the class will come in contact with diverse opinions. It is felt that a knowledge of the geographic and historical background of events, and a chance to participate in constructive discussion, will give better understanding of present world activities.

Engagement Is Announced To Close Friends

To only a few close friends, gathered for a merry evening of games in her home, 928 Fairview street, Miss Carol House revealed the romantic news of her approaching April wedding to Arthur Casey, son of Mr. and Mrs. William B. Casey, 1907 South Birch street.

Miss House, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George H. House, is a Santa Ana High school graduate who has been taking some special art courses in Orange, and applied her artistic proclivities to the form in which the announcement was made. For after the intimate little guest group had devoted the evening to the lively games planned, and time arrived for serving refreshments, each guest found at her place, an attractive framed sketch, in which the betrothal news was conveyed together with the date of April 5, selected for the wedding.

Guests sharing the pleasant affair included in addition to Miss Jeanne House, sister of the hostess, Mrs. Robert Reed (Lucille Conway) of Balboa; Mrs. Rolfe Vinzant (Velma King), Miss Percie Head of Garden Grove, Mrs. Fred Lee of Fullerton, and Mrs. Roy Grist (Phyllis Pope).

Miss House and Mr. Casey are planning a small but formal wedding to be held in Santa Ana, wedding chapel on the April date. Mr. Casey, a Santa Ana High school and Junior college graduate, was active in dramatic productions during his college work. He is interested in play writing and took first place in the Tavern Post contest. His fiancée has long been a member of Sigma Tau Psi sorority although she has been inactive for the past year.

Hermosa Worthy Matron And Patron Receive At Dinner Party

Hosts at a covered dish dinner party, Miss Henrietta Bohling, worthy matron of Hermosa chapter O. E. S., and her worthy patron, Wilford G. Lewis, and Mrs. Lewis staged an especially pleasant event Saturday evening in Miss Bohling's home, 408 West Eighth street.

It was the first time that line officers of the chapter and their "trailers" had been brought together socially since the recent installation, and afforded opportunity for everyone to become closely acquainted. The dinner plan of each guest bringing some special dish resulted in a varied and appetizing menu, enjoyment of which was heightened by the attractive appointments given small "four-course" tables. For each had its individual color in cloths and napkins, with the dinner service conforming in hue so far as was possible.

Auction bridge was played during the evening, and the hostess presented attractive prizes to Mrs. R. H. Seaver and Benjamin Lively for their high scores, and to Mrs. Lively and David Meyer as consolation for low scores.

Miss Bohling and Mr. and Mrs. Lewis entertained as guests, Messrs. and Mesdames Beisel, Cyrus H. Lurker, Harold Wahlberg, W. F. DeWolfe, J. F. Jacoby, R. H. Drake, P. N. Chapin, W. R. Goodrich, David Meyer, B. H. Seaver, Benjamin Lively, Cedric Jones, John Swanke, Mrs. Margaret Rear, Mrs. J. Edmund Snow, Mrs. Etta D. Sweet and Miss Mary Beth Hill.

Miss Vance Is Lovely Bride At Interesting Home Rites

Saturday evening, February 8 when Miss Louise Vance, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Vance of Tustin, and William Hoyt Gray of Martinez, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas M. Gray of Santa Cruz, exchanged wedding vows before the Rev. W. S. McDougall, it was at a service given the most effective of flower settings in the beautiful Vance home, 420 West Main street, Tustin.

Relatives and close family friends were bidden to the rites which were held at 8 o'clock. There was a quaint charm about the ceremony, due in the main to the Renaissance modes apparent in costumes of the bride and her attendants.

In Bridal Satin

Miss Vance chose softly lustrous satin for her gown, made with a sweeping train, the rich fabric needing little ornamentation beyond the pearl clips used at the corsage. Her veil of filmy tulle fell from a tiny Juliet cap of gold, and she carried a great sheaf of gardenias and bride roses.

Her sister, Mrs. G. O. Bixler (Charlotte Vance) as matron of honor, and Mrs. Charles F. Logan were an attractive pair of bridal attendants in their primrose yellow taffeta frocks, distinctly of the Renaissance period, and carrying sweet peas in the same lovely color. Mr. Bixler assisted Mr. Gray as best man.

As the bride approached the improvised altar with its formal flower and candle arrangement, where she was given in marriage by her father, she traversed a ribboned aisle formed by two daintily gownned ribbon bearers, the Misses Jeanette Ebban and Jacqueline De Long. Hers was a flowery path, for Charlotte Kirk, small daughter of the Kenneth Kirks of Long beach, had scattered blossoms along the way.

There was music to lighten the impressive beauty of the service conducted by the Rev. Mr. McDougall, with Mrs. S. W. Nau playing the Bridal Chorus from Wagner's "Lohengrin," and accompanying the soloists. These were Mrs.

Thirteenth Birthday Occasions Merry Celebration

Mr. and Mrs. D. G. Tidball opened their attractive home at 1421 West First street Friday night to a group of young people invited to join in a celebration of the 13th birthday anniversary of Miss Helen Tidball, daughter of the home.

The upstairs playroom was setting for the early part of the evening, spent in playing games directed by Mr. Tidball. Prizes were won by the Misses, Eugenia Bond and Peggy Redman. Guests showered the honoree with gifts.

Going downstairs to the dining room, the young people found all in readiness for a pleasant interval. Birthday cake decked with red roses and matching tapers was served with nut roll ice cream. A mirrored centerpiece and other appointments furthered a valentine theme.

Miss Helen's guests were the Misses Marjorie Mize, Lucile Andrey, Peggy Redman, June Trew, Eugenia Bond, Mary Lou Mann, Martha Horseman, Phyllis Bemis, Rosemary Blodgett, Katharine Hambricht, Eleanor Hedley, Alice Iverson, Mary Catherine Friend, Frances Head, Frances Page, Ruth Hawley, Teletia Dahl, Alice Clare McFarland, Lois Wright, Jane Downing, Joanne Hockaday, Virginia Campbell, Rosemary Harp, Carol Miller, Beth Mitchell, Harriet Sturgeon, Betty Ellen Mitchell, Mary Frances Dixon, Phyllis Luther and Patricia Rankin.

PASTOR TALKS ON CHARACTER OF WINSTON ROBY OF CHRISTIAN WED IN CHURCH

ORANGE, Feb. 10.—"Our Task" was the subject chosen yesterday by the Rev. William R. Holder for his first sermon as pastor of the Orange Christian church.

Pointing out that the elements of Christianity are personal integrity, devout spirituality and sacrificial service, the pastor said, "The character of the Christian must excel the best in all other religions if he is truly to belong to the Kingdom of God. There is no substitute for righteousness."

He added that the desire to do and to be right is the first qualification of a Christian. "We must strive not only to do better but to be better, to out-believe, out-serve and out-love others," he said.

Stressing the fact that every person is constantly influencing the lives of all those with whom he comes in contact, the pastor said, "Our job is to bring rays of light into every darkened or discouraged life, to share our faith, our love and our hope. Let us resolve to live as the Sons of God, blameless, without reproach, and to hold forth the Word of Life, shining as lights in the world."

The Rev. Mr. Holder was installed at the morning service yesterday by M. E. Bliven, chairman of the board of elders.

The Rev. Mr. Holder came to California from Texas and takes the place of the Rev. Franklin H. Minck, who is now pastor of the East Long Beach Christian church.

THE TWINYMITES

Fat Slim said: "Now, you Tinymites are fond of seeing brand new sights. The land of real, live animals amuses you, no doubt.
"I s'pose you'd like to run inside, but I've a plan that should be tried. Just gather 'round me, and I'll tell you what it's all about."
The whole bunch sat down on the ground and not one made the slightest sound till Scouty said: "We're listening. We'll pay attention, too."
"Most any plan that you suggest, I'm for, and so are all the rest. If we can help you work it out, that's what we'll gladly do."
"Well," said Old Slim, "for years or more live beasts have made all people roar. They have appeared in circuses, in monstrous zoos and such.
"Now, don't you think it would be swell to let them have some laughs, as well? The real fun that they get from life does not amount to much."
"You're right," the bunch heard Coppy roar. "Go right ahead! Tell us some more." And so the man continued: "How about some circus stunts?
"You Tinymites can stage them, and I know the beasts will think it grand. It never has been tried before, so let's just try it once."
"A little circus cage I own, and I can pull it all alone. You tots can crawl inside and then we'll have a nice parade."
"To Animal Town we'll quickly go, and there we'll put on quite a show. The beasts will be real tickled, so you need not be afraid."
Wee Goldy jumped up to her feet and said: "That sure would be a treat. Bring on your little wagon. Everything will work out fine."
The man then hauled the wagon out, and said: "Would help a lot, no doubt, if on the side of it I paint a little circus sign."

How FAME CAME AFTER DEATH for the ARTIST NOBODY KNEW

By Madelin Blitzstein

THE world is full of stories of artists to whom fame did not come until they were either too old to enjoy it, or else long since dead and unable to know anything about it.

Time and time again a painter or a sculptor has labored in poverty, hoping against hope that some day, somehow, a benevolent Maecenas would arrive to purchase his works or a wise critic would appear to understand their value and see to it that they were placed on public view in a gallery.

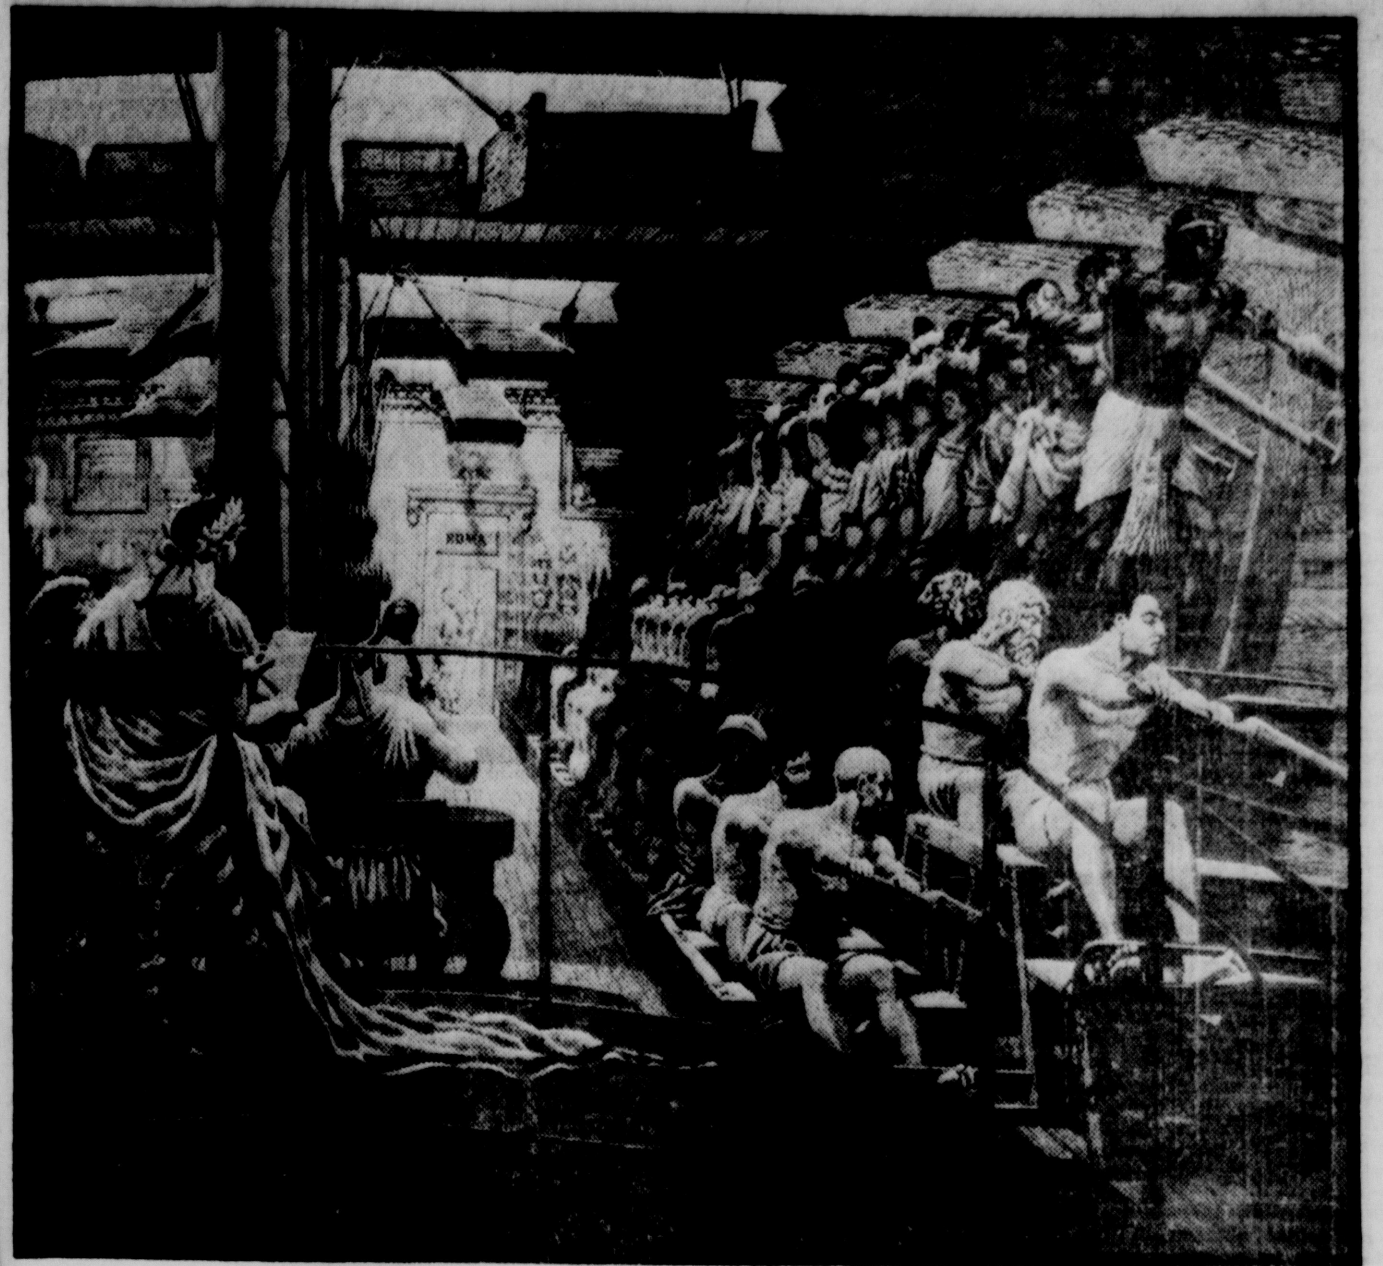

Often, of course, his hopes fail, and he goes to his grave unaccompanied by the fanfare of popular acclaim.

But sometimes, after the man has died, his masterpieces do come to the attention of someone and win the high honors which the artist himself dreamed of but never knew.

Just such a story has recently been disclosed in Philadelphia. There, in a musty cellar of an old house in Germantown, buried in trunks for more than a quarter of a century, were uncovered 1676 original drawings, all the work of one artist, none ever before published or pub-

The bright, robust humor of Philadelphia's long-forgotten artist is exemplified in this picture, "Uncle Rastus and His Mule."

All his life, Joseph Beale was known as a teacher and hack illustrator—but he had another side the public missed, and today the 1,676 drawings he made secretly are winning acclaim high school in 1862, Joseph Beale became an instructor in drawing on the high school faculty. A year later, in 1863, he joined the army and went to fight in the Civil War.

Beale served with the Union army in the Civil War. Perhaps a reflection of his experiences is found in this picture, "Return of the Volunteer."

Joseph Beale mixed a strong sense of fun with his artistic ability—as witness "Dentistry," shown at the left.

IN 1866 he returned to his post at school; perhaps because of the handsome side whiskers which he had grown he was dubbed "Professor" and that title clung to him for the rest of his life. Teaching, however, did not occupy all of Joseph Beale's time, nor did it provide him and the young lady whom he had taken as his wife with a very large salary.

The "Professor" became a hack illustrator, making drawings of political happenings and national conventions for Leslie's and Harper's Weeklies, illustrating Bible tracts, designing calendars and painting colored lantern slides.

On occasion he did portraits and sketches of the outstanding political leaders who were his close friends, men of such stature as Ulysses S. Grant, and Gen. John Hancock.

Beale did not lay down his brush and pencil before the beginning of the automobile age. Here is a sketch entitled "The First Auto."

(Copyright, 1935, by EveryWeek Magazine)

He visited all of them in their homes and discussed their careers with them.

But during his lifetime there was one side of Beale that no one knew about; that is, no one except one other man. That side was Beale's great desire to drop his hack work, of which he was ashamed, and see the drawings of which he was really fond in published form and on public view.

The one other person who knew of this ambition of Beale's is the man in whose cellar the drawings have recently been brought to light.

It is now apparent that Beale had a steady income from 1880 to 1900 of $35 a week. For this weekly stipend, Beale produced an average of one and one-half drawings per week. Some weeks he brought one drawing to the man who employed him; other weeks he brought two; but always he received $35 in wages.

THIS man who employed Beale prefers to remain anonymous, but he is willing to allow Arthur William Colen, manager of the Modern Galleries in Philadelphia, which is now in possession of the collection, to tell how the relationship between him and Beale came about.

"Last year this gentleman came to me with a few pictures, illustrating the life of Lincoln," explains Colen. "I was unable to do what he wanted—sell them on commission—but when he happened to mention the fact that he had many other works of the same artist, I asked him to show them to me.

"I went to his home and there in the cellar, in trunk after trunk, were the Beale drawings which this gentleman had had stored away for 35 years. He told me that I was looking at the product of 20 years' labor on the part of licly exhibited, and all executed with an amazing expertness of craftsmanship, exactitude of style and authenticity of detail.

What is perhaps most remarkable about these black and white wash drawings is their wide variety of subject matter. They range all the way from pictures of quaint American habits and customs to the historical events of France and England, from illustrations for biblical stories and impressions of modern inventions to a satirical series on the struggle for woman's rights.

They portray with equal facility and charm The Pied Piper of Hamelin, The Drunkard's Daughter, and Noah and the Ark; they show that the man who drew them was equally at home and well-informed whether he wanted to depict The Life of Franklin, The Little Match Girl or How Persimmon Took Care of the Baby.

SENTIMENTAL and naive many of them are, but all of them are endowed with so much detail and such a vast knowledge of current and past events that they set the artist apart immediately as a man who must have been a scholar as well as an artist.

The man who drew these recently discovered pictures was a teacher as well as a painter. Born in 1840 in Philadelphia, Joseph Boggs Beale came of a long line of blue-blooded and respected Americans. His father was Dr. Stephen Thomas Beale, an eminent physician and dentist who founded Philadelphia's first dental college.

The Beales had lived in the Quaker City for many centuries; they traced their ancestry right back to Andrew Griscom, who had purchased a plot of ground from William Penn and built Philadelphia's first brick house upon it in 1682; they were also proud of having in their genealogy Margaret Donaldson, a niece of Betsy Ross.

Now Joseph Boggs Beale grew up in an environment where American history, family tradition and the sciences were always discussed at the dinner table. Naturally he became a voracious reader and he inherited a scientific bent from his father.

But there was one love which Joseph Boggs Beale had that was not a family trait; he liked to draw. At every opportunity he would get pad and pencil and make likenesses of the visitors to the Beale home. So deep was this love for the pictorial that up until a day before his death, at the age of 85 in 1926, he called for his paint brush and board and insisted on drawing in bed.

Almost immediately after he was graduated from Central

THE MOST IMPORTANT JOB IN SANTA ANA

The most important job in Santa Ana and also the most difficult job to perform is the Superintendent of Santa Ana Public Schools. Proper education that begets fundamental principles of liberty, as set down by the Declaration of Independence, is the most important thing for the citizens of Santa Ana, and every other American citizen, to consider. Practical people pretty generally agree that, just in proportion as we have lost our liberty, have we lost opportunity for our citizens to get what they need. By liberty we mean the right of every citizen to use his talents and his energy to do what he thinks society most needs, and not the right to combine to prevent others from learning or producing or the right to destroy large amounts of wealth. Exactly as we have lost this, have we slipped into depressions.

We so often confuse democracy as being synonymous with liberty. They are in no way connected. The tyranny of the majority in a democracy can absolutely kill liberty. Thus there is great responsibility on the shoulders of the Superintendent of Schools to properly teach liberty, and the right kind of liberty.

The Board of Education, as a whole is, of course, more important than the Superintendent of Public Schools because they select the Superintendent.

The conditions, under which the present Superintendent took over the Santa Ana Public Schools, made the proper teaching of liberty almost impossible. Indeed, it was impossible to do it at once. It has to be worked out in a slow, evolutionary process. The present Superintendent of Schools succeeded a Superintendent of Schools who was a twin brother mentally of Karl Marx. A 30 minutes' talk by the writer of this article with the former Superintendent is the cause of the above statement being made. The general environment of the community, when the present Superintendent took authority, was largely saturated with the same kind of beliefs. In addition to this, the depression coming on, which made it more difficult for people to get what they needed, further bewildered the majority of voters and made it more difficult to teach sound, far-sighted, fundamental principles. Thus, it would make it practically impossible to rapidly adopt text books in the public schools that explain what real liberty is. Many of the text books were selected by the former Superintendent of Schools and by his lieutenants. The present Superintendent is handicapped by the State laws that compel him to retain instructors who do not understand liberty.

The importance, however, of the public education is so great that every citizen should give every possible assistance to the Superintendent of public education in the City of Santa Ana to help him bring about the best public school systems in the State of California.

CONSTRUCTIVE CRITICISM

William Allen White, dynamic Kansas editor, recently gave the Republican party some sound advice anent the forthcoming campaign. He suggested that party leaders are wasting a lot of time criticizing the present administration. What they should be doing, he said, is planning a sound platform that offers a cure for the ills of the nation.

While party leaders are blasting the New Deal and the Democratic administration they should remember that their candidate will need a platform. Not only will he need a platform this year but he will need one that offers a real solution to the problem of the nation. Broad generalizations about a "sound business policy" will not be enough this election.

There are still millions of voters who recall that it was during an era of "sound business" administration and "rugged individualism" that the nation was plunged into the depression. All the voters know that the nation is facing a crisis. They know that the depression is not over, despite artificial respiration that has been applied to business and industry. They also realize that something must be done and done soon.

Because they know these things, glittering generalities will not satisfy them when they go to the polls in November. The question they will ask the Republican party is "What are you going to do about it?" And they will want a definite answer.

Let's come up out of the mud—for awhile, wash our hands and sit down at the table and plan an intelligent program for recovery, and back the party candidate with an intelligent platform built on the determination to "Go Ahead America."

A BILL THAT HITS CRIME

Almost hidden in the mass of new bills before Congress is a measure providing that, in federal courts, a newspaper man shall not be required, under peril of contempt, to reveal a news source.

Laws granting this vital privilege to the press are already on the statute books of New Jersey, Maryland, and Alabama. They were placed there because, if it is to collect and disseminate information, the press must be guarded as to its sources. Reveal the source of much important information carried nowadays by the press and the supply would be cut off.

In exposing crime and corruption, the newspaper must retain the right to protect its confidential informants.

Whether or not Congress passes the bill, individual states could lend no greater hand to good government than to secure this fundamental right for newspapers. In its crusading, the press today holds a unique position, and its need here is far above partisanship.

NO OBJECTION TO LEWIS BROWNE'S ADDRESS

Some readers got the idea that The Register was objecting to Lewis Browne's public speaking in Santa Ana. This is the farthest from our thoughts. The only thing that The Register was protesting was the spending of public money that is so badly needed for more effective educational purposes. While we have no authority to speak for the Legion, we believe this is exactly their objection. They have no objection to Browne addressing private audiences but they do object to his being paid out of the public treasury to address audiences. While the money comes from the State, this "pork-barrel" way of grabbing leads only to extravagance.

The City of Santa Ana evidently is trying to economize in other ways so much that they do not even have the money to have in the Santa Ana Public Library one of the greatest masterpieces ever written, an unabridged edition of Adam Smith's "Wealth of Nations." It costs $12.00.

Another example of our need of money—the writer requested a book from the library, which the library requested from the State library and there are four requests ahead of the Santa Ana library for this book.

When the State goes into the business of publicly educating the adults, it becomes the tyranny of the majority over the minority. It would be just as fair for the State to pay for a radio to inform the public. Who is to control those who are to do the educating?

The only questions that are really interesting and worth studying are controversial questions. It seems to be unfair to force the minority class to pay for what those who are in control seem to think important. Let everyone speak on these controversial questions, who has anything to say, but let them finance themselves or let those who think it worth presenting to the world pay the bill. The library is the best way to solve the controversial questions. Let all books on all sides be in the library. This way, there can be much greater dissemination of opinion on each side of every question than there can be by lectures, as many books could be bought for the price of one lecture. There then would be less cause for complaint of one side not having their side presented.

WE'RE DIZZY AGAIN

Periodically this country loses itself in the jazzy limbo of a senseless new song hit. At one time we went "Crazy, Crazy, Over Horses, Horses, Horses." At another, we sold out the whole nation to "Yes, We Have No Bananas." Now we usher in a new smash product—"The Music Goes 'Round and Around."

Said to have been inspired by a tipsy young night club guest who demanded that the orchestra show him what produced tunes, the song, utterly without sense, marks a new high in national dizziness. It's so popular you can't tune it out.

At first thought one might lose his faith in the American people. Certainly they fall hard for nothing. On second thought, "Round and Around" is better than the maulin drivel we had a few months back, when we got so sentimental we became sloppy.

And, finally, it seems, a people adapted to shifting its mass interest so easily is pretty well set psychologically.

PARAGRAPHS

By Robert Quillen

But if Congress curbs the Supreme Court, who will curb Congress?

Common reaction to the waste of national resources: "Let me get mine and darn the future."

A woman worries about the future till she gets a husband; a man doesn't worry about the future till he gets a wife.

There is a growing suspicion that "Liberal" is just a high-brow substitute for the old-fashioned word "knocker."

Senators should have known we didn't go to war to collect loans. That is always done by the Marines.

A BORE IS A CALLER WHO KEEPS HIS OVERCOAT ON AND FUSSES BECAUSE YOU KEEP THE PLACE TOO WARM.

A reader asks what man did the most for civilization. Well, what about the man who invented taxes?

The popularity of mystery stories isn't surprising. It's the only kind of thing you can read with the radio going.

But, Alas! if nations must go elsewhere for war supplies, they will go to the same place for their peace supplies.

AMERICANISM: Congressman spending two billion of public money to keep his $10,000 job; farmer eager to destroy the Supreme Court to get a $500 bonus check.

If it will make Mr. Hoover feel any better, the radio station operator wasn't the only person to cut off his speech.

The truth is that we went to war because we can't watch a fight without getting excited enough to horn in.

Still, the central government always seems to have too much power when the other party is in.

It seems fair enough. Every time the radical gets more relief, the conservative gets more tax-free securities.

Curing a depression is like any other cure. Nature does the work and the doctors get the credit.

Register Clearing House

Editor Register:

I read with approval that the American Legion has again come to the rescue of the country, or, anyway, Orange County.

It is about time. The American intellect, such as it is hereabouts, should be protected. Apparently it is none too robust. Here we are, a lot of virtually defenseless Americans, when along comes Lewis Browne, and after we have listened for four nights in innocence, comfort and respectability, we find that all this time we have been exposed to the deadliest germs of what is usually called "subversive teaching." Not that Browne said he was a Communist, or is, but that he spoke approvingly of Russia, and that is unquestionably dangerous to intellectuals as fragile as ours seem to be.

If this is allowed to go on, who can tell but what some otherwise sound and sane banker, for instance, who has previously been contentedly addicted to principal and interest, will tear off his red winter undergarment, tie it to a fishing pole, and lead a shoutin', revolution mob of 2500 infected Santa Ana intellectuals to storm the city hall and demand Communism in Santa Ana?

Only prompt action can save the tottering minds of our home people from a horrible fate.

Anyway, we here in Santa Ana have all of the ideas we can handle without importing any, what with water bonds hobbling up like gas bills on the first of the month, the grand jury making a life job of it, and Miss Whitney's place not yet filled. Our undernourished mentality can stand just so much, and when this Russianized Englishman pours his "story into us we tremble on the very verge of trying to think. We are as unprotected as a nudist at the North Pole.

Who'd have thought, two months ago, that the school board would let 1400 misguided innocents learn about Civilization, only to find that Communism is a going concern in Russia? We have to be careful or some speaker will come along and let it out that there is a war in Ethiopia.

This exposing of adult, but immature, minds to the ruthlessness of world affairs is monkeying with Fate. Who can tell but what we will all be inspired to commit mayhem, harikari or something like that?

It must have been a shock to a lot of Browne listeners to find out about Civilization, and that they have it in England, Germany, France and Italy, though of course not in Russia, and probably not in Asia. Most of us thought it was only in the United States.

No, we must not be subjected to such knowledge. We don't, unaided, know whether we want the United States government or the Russian, and probably that 1400 listeners, in a city election tomorrow, would vote for Mr. Stalin, thinking that it was Fred Rowland. It may be already too late to save them, but we can look ahead and see that it never, never happens again.

AN INTERESTED SPECTATOR.

Editor Register, Santa Ana, Calif.

Dear Sir:

As a taxpayer and a loyal citizen of the United States I desire to raise my voice in protest against the utterances of Lewis Browne last Monday night in the First Methodist church. I can't believe the board of education, or the school faculty had knowledge in advance of the nature of his remarks or they would not have allowed it to have been delivered. It seems like a rather weak excuse for the representative of the board of education to say that "the speaker's views were not necessarily those of the school board or the school administration," if he was correctly quoted. According to that theory any teacher in the public schools can promulgate any doctrine he or she may choose and the administration need not assume responsibility for their teachings.

When we as a nation are doing all we can to keep Russian Communism out of the United States it doesn't appeal to red-blooded American citizens to have Lewis Browne, or any one else, deliver such a speech from the pulpit of one of our leading churches, under the auspices of the Adult Education department of our city schools.

Very respectfully,
E. G. WARNER,
Former Mayor of Santa Ana.

Editor Register: In answer to Legion protest to Lewis Browne's lecture last Monday evening.

There was a time when I whistled as I passed the cemetery. Let me tell you, my dear Legionnaire, there were no ghosts there. I found that out by a little investigation. The bogie man in the dark fades away in the light. There is no premium on ignorance.

Russia is a place. It occupies a very large portion of the earth's surface to be ruled by one nation. It would be hard to hide it. It has real people, not puppets. They have their own difficulties and advantages and as a rule attend to their own business about as well as you and I do. If you don't like Russia let it alone. Do you know anything about it? I don't, but have made every effort possible to learn.

That is why I attended Mr. Browne's lecture. He was in that country last year to make a study of conditions. He spoke with apparent authority and I thought I had something real authentic until you came along and spoiled the whole thing. Mr. Browne can never be the same to me again. I never realized he was the menace that he is. I have heard him at all five of his lectures so far, so will go back to hear him just once more. He does seem to be a little better informed on other subjects so may get a little information from him yet.

We feel that to be properly informed is our only hope. That is why we are completely sold on the idea of adult education. There is nothing bias or narrow taught there. The assimilation of knowledge is the goal. An American Legion member with a message, I am quite sure, would be welcomed on the program.

Lewis Browne's lectures speak for themselves. The attendance has been by far the greatest of any speaker employed by the school. Whose business is it to censor the school program? The formal protest to the state department of education by the American Legion will be like a bee on a bull's nose compared with the formal approval of his lectures to the same body by the people of Santa Ana. The bee must sting to be recognized and the sting is more destructive to the bee than to the bull. We can't guess wrong too many times.

Our sympathy will be with our school superintendent, Mr. Henderson, Monday evening as he passes out the pacifiers to the peevish, so the best of us can hear the lecture.

O. V. DART.

Editor Register:

There are some of your readers who have been greatly surprised at the headlines and the editorials of your paper concerning the lectures of Mr. Lewis Browne in Santa Ana.

Either of two things, those criticizing did not attend his lectures or if attending, did not fully comprehend his ideas. It appears as if excerpts were read from the newspaper and the lectures judged accordingly.

No man has attracted the thinking class of people in Santa Ana in the past few years as has Mr. Browne. It has been a liberal education to some of us to have the opportunity to hear so keen a mind, such clever wit, and to share his knowledge of the world situation.

Many of us resent exceedingly having an organization such as this to act as censor as to who shall be allowed to speak from the platform of Santa Ana. This occurred once before. This time it was an anti-war speaker sponsored by the young people of our schools. It was these young people then who resented the censorship of this organization.

If I judge correctly it was not that Mr. Browne savored of Communism but his attitude is against war, which in the minds of some is unpatriotic but to others it is religious.

Very truly yours,
(Mrs. Harry E.) Iva N. Owings.

Editor Register:

In your editorial last night on "Adult Education," you say: "Adult education is all right, but there is good education and bad education." Then you go on to make it clear that "good" education is that which emanates from your own reactionary type of mind, and that "bad" education is the kind advanced by a group you are pleased derisively to term "Brain-trusters."

Clearly, you resent our having an occasional student or college professor imported into Santa Ana. That was first apparent when you removed the brilliant Glenn Frank, President of Wisconsin University, from your editorial page and substituted therefor the Wall Street yes-man, David Lawrence.

Please, Mr. Editor, we adults want to learn something, but we would like to hear both sides of it. Even if it comes from a college professor. In our youth we were assured that teaching is a noble and unselfish profession. Now there it is, confusing to see teachers caricatured as monkeys in three-cornered caps, to read that civilization will be destroyed if they are listened to, and to be told daily by the newspapers that the old-fashioned politician, as a government advisor, should never be displaced by a college professor.

In spite of all that, we haven't yet found an instance where a college professor has been caught sneaking up a Washington alley with a little black bag.

In spite of all that, we haven't failed to notice that we can now draw our money from the bank; that wheat has gone up from two bits to a dollar; that business has doubled in Santa Ana; that building has tripled in Santa Ana; that the suicides and despair have vast-ly decreased; and that all of it began to happen just about the time we exchanged the Falls and the Ohio gang for college professors.

I say—thank God for college professors. More power to those fellows, who are truly the hope of this country. Without them we would only have one source of adult education, newspaper editorials. And while occasionally for short periods we get editorials of a progressive tone, such as appeared in the Register under Mr. Burke, it is rarely long before some reactionist comes to town and turns the paper into a rubber stamp for the U. S. Chamber of Commerce.

That being our present dilemma, it is no wonder that 1500 Santa Anans pack themselves in every Monday night until the very walls bulge, with every seat taken on hour before time for Louis Browne to begin speaking. It is no wonder that thousands of others, seeking something besides that same old rubber stamp, are turned away. It is no wonder that 500 Santa Anans leave their Register editorials unread each Wednesday evening, so that they can hear the brilliant Dr. Earl Cranston. These men are liberals. To call them anything is to echo insult when, told by his attorney that a certain inquisitive stockholder was asking questions, Insull said: "Oh, just call him a communist and let it go at that."

If adult education were limited to such claptrap, the first thing you know we'd be believing it. You remember Will Rogers' old remark: "All I know is what I read in the papers," that for many years was just about true. A rather pitiful truth, don't you think? What if Santa Anans didn't know anything except what they saw on the editorial page of the Register? What if the profound erudition of our new Mark Hanna-minded citizen from Ohio were to become our sole fountain of new knowledge?

I can only hope that our city superintendent of schools will not now embarrass my high opinion of college professors (Brain-trusters to you) by preselecting Mr. Browne's lecture next Monday night with in effect some such apology as this: "Adults of Santa Ana, it was all a mistake to bring to Santa Ana this brilliant student of world affairs, whose personality has charmed you and whose addresses have impelled the most enthusiastic audience response ever impelled in the history of Orange county. Nevertheless it was all a mistake. I shall see that he is chased out of town and never allowed to come back. After this, if you want to know anything, go ask Mr. Holles."

Very sincerely yours,
ALLAN Y. ELSTON.

Little Benny's Note Book

By LEE PAPE

Ma was doing the crossword puzzle partly to herself and partly out loud, and pop took a little notebook out of his pocket and started to look in it, saying, It seems to be simple enough if you just use your head, I mean anybody can play the market with a certain degree of success if they just exercise good judgement and moderation.

Willum Potts have you been dabbling in stocks and things again? Dont you dare give me yes for an answer, ma said. The idea of even dreaming of such a thing after the mess you got yourself into, she said, and pop said, O, you mean the crash. That was the big wind that blew everybody down, he said.

It was the big wind that showed which way the straws were blowing, and a man that cant profit by passed experience doesn't deserve any future sympathy, ma said, and pop said, But just listen to these figures.

And he started to read out of his notebook, saying, Monday, hawt International Electric at 25, ten shares, sold them Wednesday at 35, Tuesday, bawt one hundred Liberty Lumber at 5 and 50 Silex at 15 and sold them Friday at 8 and 20 respectively. There you are, there's a cool profit of 650 dollars with just a little mild, conservative buying, pop said, and ma said, Why, Willum how wonderful. Of course if you have some really scientific method, that's another horse of a different color. Now maybe I'll be able to afford 2 or 3 little things that I've been thinking of more longingly than seriously, such as an English Wedgewood breakfast set, she said.

Not so fast, pop said. These are dummy figures. I mean I've just been marking down little investments that I mite of made but actually didn't, just as an experiment, so the results, although interesting, can hardly be called substantial, he said, and ma said, Why Willum, you mean thing. Dont you dare let me catch you gambling on the market under any provocation, and what's more just to teach you a lesson I believe I'll buy that Wedgewood set anyway.

Which she properly will.

To stay the ravages of time, the Iglesia de Nuestra Senora la Reina de los Angeles, will soon undergo extensive repairs, the first since it was built 90 years ago. Father Cabarrera considers the work necessary if the landmark is to be preserved for the future. Walls are crumbling and huge pieces of plaster, in some cases half a dozen feet wide, have fallen away.

OUR CHILDREN

HAND RAISING

Young teachers are always bothered by pupils raising their hands to make some, usually idle, request. Just as the teacher is ready to make the point of the lesson, when she is straining every nerve to hold the attention of the class, a hand goes up, waggles frantically, will not be frowned down or denied.

"Well, James, what is it?"

"I feel a draught."

Being young and inexperienced, the teacher loses her patience. "Really? And I suppose you couldn't change your seat, or close the window, or do anything to keep from interrupting the class work and losing time? Close the window." James does so, clattering the window pole, stumbling over its length, tripping on the pipes of the radiator. Now every eye is on him and the whole class watch breathlessly while he waves the long pole toward the window top. Somebody jumps up to help him. At last the window is closed. James and his helper clump to their seats. Little Maggie, all thought of the lesson flown, raises her hand and asks meekly: "Please may I leave the room?"

"No you can't," snaps the teacher. "Don't another one of you raise your hand this morning. I'm just sick and tired of this nonsense. The whole morning gone and nothing done but shutting the window and going to the wastebasket and getting drinks and what not. Now attention."

But little Maggie will not be denied. She MUST leave the room. She signifies this by certain unmistakable signs, and the teacher MUST let her go. With bad grace she says: "Leave the room, Maggie." Maggie goes, the picture of protesting virtue, outraged dignity, meekness trampled to earth. The class turn sympathetic eyes after her retreating and sorrowful form. Five hands go up. Everybody now has the idea. All of them must leave the room, and at once.

Next the teacher goes over the book carefully at the end of a few days. She notes the children who leave often and informs the parents that the child seems to need the doctor's care as he is out of the room so many minutes daily and is rapidly losing ground in his lessons in consequence. That either sends an ailing child to the doctor for help, or it brings an idling child to time. The teacher is free of the whole business. She builds up a class idea that work is very important and not to be interrupted.

Day By Day In Washington

By DAVID LAWRENCE

(Copyright, 1935)

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10.—The United Mine Workers of America, who this week entered the political arena by pledging some of their membership funds to help re-elect President Roosevelt, established a precedent that may conceivably have a far-reaching effect on the national campaigns of the future.

Not long ago when the National Association of Manufacturers was urged to go into politics, there was much criticism of that suggestion and today the N. A. M. under the leadership of its new president, Colby M. Chester, chairman of the board of General Foods corporation, is distinctly opposed to any participation by the association in political affairs.

But the United Mine Workers apparently can do something which individual corporations or groups of corporations cannot do—namely contribute directly to a political campaign and take part in it. Under the present federal laws, corporations cannot make contributions to any political party.

Labor unions, on the other hand, are not incorporated and hence can use their members' dues for political purposes without running afoul of the law. It is true the United Mine Workers, for instance, will have to report all its expenditures for political purposes, which it doubtless will do. But the fact that labor unions can do that which corporations cannot do, presents an interesting angle of unequal application of federal laws.

Most corporation executives doubtless would have no objection to seeing labor unions contributing to political campaigns, but they on the other hand, might want to see the law amended to enable the employers of the country to use company funds for the same purpose, subject to the consent of the stockholders.

In some instances, corporations have placed the matter of fighting pending legislation before their stockholders and have been authorized to spend funds for public education on their particular matters, especially when legislation has seemed to threaten the safety of the investments.

This, however, is a different matter from contributing to a political campaign where the manifest purpose is to elect or defeat candidates for public office. The federal statutes are rather value as to what constitutes a political cause, but it would seem that only funds contributed toward the election or defeat of a particular candidate, or group of candidates, for federal office would be within the federal scope.

Otherwise, any contribution by a corporation toward the various organizations engaged in supporting or fighting particular issues or measures would be subject to attack and the right of petition guaranteed by the constitution would be seriously impaired.

The decision of the United Mine

Workers, by vote of their convention, to authorize the use of membership dues for political purposes is a short step to the organization of a labor political party as in England. The American Federation of Labor has rarely, as an organization, thrown the weight of influence in an election campaign and there is no case on record where it has openly used its funds to help elect or defeat members of congress, though doubtless members of local unions have done a good deal of electioneering.

It is difficult to see how the federal laws prohibiting
